access data on online platforms such as search engines social networks and e commerce platforms commonly referred to as the gatekeepers of the Internet The question arises whether the denial of a dominant firm to grant competitors access to its data could constitute a refusal to deal and lead to competition law liability under the so called essential facilities doctrine according to which firms need access to shared knowledge in order to be able to compete A possible duty to share data with rivals also brings to the forefront the interaction of competition law with data protection legislation considering that the required information may include personal data of individuals Building on the refusal to deal concept and using a multidisciplinary approach the analysis covers such issues and topics as the following data portability interoperability data as a competitive advantage or entry barrier in digital markets market definition and dominance with respect to data disruptive versus sustaining innovation role of intellectual property regimes economic trade off in essential facilities cases relationship of competition enforcement with data protection law and data related competition concerns in merger cases The author draws on a wealth of relevant material including EU and US decision making practice case law and policy documents as well as economic and empirical literature on the link between competition and innovation The book concludes with a proposed framework for the application of the essential facilities doctrine to potential forms of abuse of dominance relating to data In addition it makes suggestions as to how data protection interests can be integrated into competition policy An invaluable contribution to ongoing academic and policy discussions about how data related competition concerns should be addressed under competition law the analysis clearly demonstrates how existing competition tools for market definition and assessment of dominance can be applied to online platforms It will be of immeasurable value to the many jurists business persons and academics concerned with this very timely subject

Letting the People Decide Richard Johnston, Andre Blais, 1992-09-15 The authors have based the book primarily on data derived from the 1988 Canadian Election Study for which they were co investigators The survey was a rolling cross section a daily tracking of the campaign designed explicitly to monitor electoral dynamics The multivariate techniques commonly involved in the analysis of campaign data are presented here in an accessible way as graphs rather than tables Videotapes of prime time news analyses on CBC CTV and SRC outlets as well as some newspaper commentaries have been integrated into the survey This information is contrasted with an analysis of electoral dynamics based on one hundred years of census and electoral data The authors make a variety of significant arguments about the historical and political basis of the parties eventual positions on the issue of free trade the overriding importance of that issue to the 1988 election the roles of the party leaders and perhaps most important the political impact of campaigns
