Ottawa Stories Images Through The Seasons:

Ottawa Stories Paul Von Baich, F. J. McEvoy, Mary Ann Simpkins, 1994-01-01 An Ottawa Album Marion Van de Wetering, 1997-10-01 This illustrated history of Ottawa traces the city's development from the days when Bytown was a lumber village to its emergence as Canada's capital and fourth largest urban area. From the earliest photographs of the original Centre Block of the Parliament Buildings through the VE Day and VJ Day celebrations at the end of World War II and beyond, this beautiful book of superb black and white photographs and informative text offers a charming glimpse of the evolving city. The photographs have been chosen both for their historical importance and their quality as visual art. They show a cross section of life in the developing capital from the formality of Rideau Hall to working people selling wood and straw in Byward Market. This art among the best from Canada's early photographers has been culled from major collections in the National Archives of Canada and Ottawa's city archives. Many of the photographs have never been published before.

The Fleming Files Martha Fleming, Allan Fleming, Robert Tombs, Devin Crawley, Donna Braggins, Carol Payne, Brian Donnelly, 2018-01-15. The Fleming Files: Allan Fleming's Life and Works delves into the wide-ranging body of work produced by Canadian graphic designer Allan Fleming. His designs, familiar not only to typophiles but have become part of the Canadian landscape from the iconic CN Rail logo to stamps for Canada Post. This edition, which contains over 55 photographs, illustrates the personal and professional life of one of Canada's most influential graphic designers. Exhibitors Daily Review, 1926 The Official Picture Carol Payne, 2013-06-01. Mandated to foster a sense of national cohesion, the National Film Board of Canada's Still Photography Division was the country's official photographer during the mid-twentieth century. Like the Farm Security Administration and other agencies in the US, the NFB used photographs to serve the nation. Division photographers shot everything from official state functions to images of the routine events of daily life, producing some of the most dynamic photographs of the time seen by millions of Canadians and international audiences in newspapers, magazines, exhibitions, and filmstrips. In The Official Picture, Carol Payne argues that the Still Photography Division played a significant role in Canadian nation building during WWII and the two decades that followed. Payne examines key images, themes, and periods in the Division's history, including the depiction of women, munitions workers, landscape photography in the 1950s.

and 60s and portraits of Canadians during the Centennial in 1967 to demonstrate how abstract concepts of nationhood and citizenship as well as attitudes toward gender class linguistic identity and conceptions of race were reproduced in photographs The Official Picture looks closely at the work of many Division photographers from staff members Chris Lund and Gar Lunney during the 1940s and 1950s to the expressive documentary photography of Michel Lambeth Michael Semak and Pierre Gaudard in the 1960s and after The Division also produced a substantial body of Northern imagery documenting Inuit and Native peoples Payne details how Inuit groups have turned to the archive in recent years in an effort to reaffirm their own cultural identity For decades the Still Photography Division served as the country's image bank producing a government endorsed official picture of Canada A rich archival study The Official Picture brings the history of the Division long overshadowed by the Board's cinematic divisions to light

When Television was Young Paul Rutherford, 1990-01-01 A decade after the first Canadian telecasts in September 1952 TV had conquered the country Why was the little screen so enthusiastically welcomed by Canadians Was television in its early years more innovative less commercial and more Canadian than current offerings In this study of what is often called the golden age of television Paul Rutherford has set out to dispel some cherished myths and to resurrect the memory of a noble experiment in the making of Canadian culture He focuses on three key aspects of the story The first is the development of the national service including the critical acclaim won by Radio Canada the struggles of the CBC's English service to provide mass entertainment that could compete with the Hollywood product and the effective challenge of private television to the whole dream of public broadcasting The second deals with the wealth of made in Canada programming available to please and inform viewers even commercials receive close attention Altogether Rutherford argues Canadian programming reflected as well as enhanced the prevailing values and assumptions of the mainstream The final focus is on McLuhan's Question What happens to society when a new medium of communications enters the picture Rutherford's findings cast doubt upon the common presumptions about the awesome power of television Television in Canada Rutherford concludes amounts to a failed revolution It never realized the ambitions of its masters or the fears of its critics Its course was shaped not only by the will of the government the power of commerce and the empire of Hollywood but also by the desires and habits of the viewers
