Breeding ban called for by Norwegian welfare group

Norwegian Society for Protection of Animals

THE ANIMAL welfare group that took the Norwegian Kennel Club (NKKF) to court, leading to the ban on the breeding of Cavalier King Charles Spaniels in Norway.

Norway, is calling on the government to extend the ban to other breeds.

The Norwegian Society for Protection of Animals (NSPA) is putting pressure on the Ministry of Agriculture and Food, Ole Pålsson, to take further action against pedigree dogs.

In 2023, after a long court battle, their suit against the NKKF, breed clubs and breeders led to a ban on the breeding of Cavalier King Charles Spaniels. The NSPA had also tried to ban the breeding of Bullterriers but they were unsuccessful and the breed was registered.

According to the Supreme Court judgement, the breeding of Cavaliers is against the law. The reason they gave was because of the breed's health challenges. However, there were dissenting opinions in the Supreme Court, with 3-2 in favour of prohibiting the breeding of Cavaliers.

Julia Buckton, veterinarian and CEO at the NSPA said, "Through the Supreme Court judgement, the Society sent its strongest signal yet that the system for breeding pedigree dogs has failed."

"Nevertheless, we are not willing to let the Norwegian Kennel Club to ignore the current situation for other dog breeds. Several dog breeds are just as sick as the Cavalier, and there are even being bred in violation of the Animal Welfare Act."

FORBIDDEN

In a statement, welfare organisation said, "The Supreme Court's judgement, which was issued on 10 October 2023, concluded that it is forbidden to breed purebred Cavalier King Charles Spaniels in Norway."

"The Supreme Court concluded that the probability of passing on genetic, hereditary disorders in this breed is so high, that further breeding is a violation of Norwegian law. Corresponding statute violations of the Animal Welfare Act occur for other dog breeds with the same disease burden as the Cavalier."

"The Norwegian Society for Protection of Animals therefore stresses that new dog breeding regulations must stop unethical dog breeding, which is harmful to dogs."

regulations must stop unethical dog breeding, which is harmful to dogs.

"Breeding based on the idea of 'pure breeds' has led to extensive inbreeding. This leads to disorders like major joint problems, allergies, poor reproductive ability and decreased lifespan are commonly seen in several breeds. These disorders
