Libraries of Light Alistair Black, 2016-10-04 For the first hundred years or so of their history public libraries in Britain were built in an array of revivalist architectural styles This backward looking tradition was decisively broken in the 1960s as many new libraries were erected up and down the country In this new Routledge book Alistair Black argues that the architectural modernism of the post war years was symptomatic of the age s spirit of renewal In the 1960s public libraries truly became libraries of light and Black further explains how this phrase not only describes the shining new library designs with their open plan decluttered Scandinavian inspired designs but also serves as a metaphor for the public library s role as a beacon of social egalitarianism and cultural universalism A sequel to Books Buildings and Social Engineering 2009 Black s

new book takes his fascinating story of the design of British public libraries into the era of architectural modernism

The Public Library in Britain, 1914-2000 Alistair Black, 2000 This work challenges the myth of the public library as an uncontroversial institution without a history It focuses on the emancipatory role of the public library and questions the institutional conservative impulse which has impeded the acceptance of popular culture into public libraries The Women Who Invented Twentieth-Century Children's Literature Elizabeth West, 2022-10-24 Publishing for children between 1930 and 1960 has been denigrated as a relatively fallow period for creativity and quality certainly in comparison with the golden ages of children's literature that preceded and succeeded it This book questions this perception by using archival evidence to argue that the work of what was predominantly a female group of editors illustrators authors and librarians collectively referred to as bookwomen resulted in many titles which are still considered as classics today The bookwomen reframed ideas about how children's publishing should be approached and valued and in doing so laid the foundations for a subsequent generation of children's authors and publishers who were to achieve far greater prominence The key to the success of the bookwomen was their willingness to experiment the strength of their relationships and their comprehensive understanding of the book production process By focusing on a selection of women working across all aspects of the book production process this book demonstrates that both individually and collectively women capitalised on their position as other to the existing male institutions Continuity and Innovation in the Public Library Margaret Kinnell Evans, Margaret Kinnell, Rodney Paul Sturges, 1996 The authors have gathered some of the leading experts on public library policy to argue and discuss how the past present and future can meet and enrich the fabric of the public library service The Australian Library Journal, 1988
