Lowcost Transport In Asia A Comparative Report On Five Cities:

Low-cost Transport in Asia Romeo B. Ocampo,1982 The Malay World of Southeast Asia Patricia Lim Pui Huen,1986 Over 5 000 entries arranged in four parts Part I comprises reference and general works to provide a guide to information on Southeast Asia Part II provides the setting of space and time Part III features the people and Part IV the many facets of culture and society language ideas beliefs values institutions creative expression and social and cultural change Within each section the arrangement is geographical beginning with Southeast Asia as a whole followed by the various countries in alphabetical order Low-cost Transport (Asia) Romeo B. Ocampo,1981 Urban Transportation Abstracts ,1985 Rural Transport In Developing Countries I. Barwell,G. A. Edmonds,J.D.G.F. Howe,J. De Veen,2019-06-21 For more than three decades investment in the transport sector has been a priority for developing country governments With a few exceptions roads have accounted for the major part of these investments The explicit and often articulated assumption upon which the decision to allocate such large sums of money to road transport has been made is that road transport and development are inextricably linked The implicit and rarely articulated assumption is that the provision of suitable roads will lead to the operation of an adequate level of road transport services If roads do not actually produce economic development it has been argued they certainly play a major role This belief in the beneficial effects of roads is not wholly unsubstantiated Clearly the provision of some form of access is vital for the development of the rural economy Nevertheless the studies carried out over the last 10 15 years on the impact of highway investment have sounded a cautionary note George W Wilson writing in the concluding chapter of the Brookings Institution studies on transport and development suggested that A much more sceptical attitude towards transport appears essential and far more attention needs to be devoted to the set of circumstances surrounding expansion of transport capacity 1 The suggestion of a more restrained attitude reflected a growing concern that transport and in particular roads was only one factor amongst a large number that needed to be integrated for effective development The concern to see road transport in a wider context partly explains the move towards the evaluation of the social as well as strictly economic benefits of road construction Strengthening Urban Management Thomas L. Blair,2013-03-08 Managing cities and providing housing essential infra structure and public services in an era of great pressures on municipal resources are challenging domestic issues in all parts of the world Increasingly city administrators and local government authorities in developing countries and western industrial nations are seeking to share experiences and exchange information in a search for solutions This highly informative volume attempts to meet this critical need and to aid development cooperation among municipalities Strengthening Urban Management presents the practical problems and approaches to the provision of housing transportation and the mobilization of the requisite finance and manpower for local government in contrasting urban situations It draws upon selected papers contributed to international meetings and world congresses sponsored by the International Union of Local Authorities The Hague Netherlands Subject areas are illustrated in city examples given by mayors administrators and planners from Lusaka Harare Nairobi Osaka Jakarta Bandung Vienna Stockholm Caracas and Rio de Janeiro Theme introductions and contributions from leading international and national agencies highlight the important role and grave difficulties facing local government in urban management and planning Urban Transport in South and Southeast Asia Venkatachala Setty Pendakur,1984

Transportation Research Board,1993 IATSS Research ,2004 The Analysis and Interpretation of Canadian Transportation Aid Policy Claude Comtois,Université de Montréal. Centre de recherche sur les transports,1992 This paper examines the hypothesis that regional transportation assistance to developing countries more specifically to landlocked and transit countries jointly plays an important role in the development process of the Third World The paper first discusses the evolution of the transport sector in developing countries then analyzes their problems and transportation needs It then examines the Canadian response to Third World transportation problems with particular attention to the characteristics evolution magnitude and distribution of transportation aid Finally it evaluates Canadian assistance particularly in the context of recent policy changes A World of Giant Cities Mattei Dogan,John D. Kasarda,1988 This major work will change the way experts look at big cities By defining a new kind of city the region dominating city The Metropolis Era offers a new framework for exploring the problems and future of big cities What makes a city grow or stagnate This two volume work provides a much needed assessment of the factors that influence growth and change Eminent sociologists economists planners historians geographers political scientists demographers and urban scholars from 16 countries contribute to this assessment And The Metropolis Era is the first work of this type to cover third world cities as well as cities of the industrialized nations The Metropolis Era is designed for scholars and students of the multidisciplinary world of urban studies Municipal officials planners and policymakers of large cities will find this book invaluable as they seek ways to improve the quality of their cities life For those who have been waiting a long time for a substantive cross cultural resource in urban studies the wait is over In a two volume series Mattei Dogan and John D Kasarda have presented what surely is the most representative and scholarly collection of articles on world urbanization The first of the two volumes which is being reviewed here focuses on a cross cultural comparison of cities demographically historically politically economically and or administratively The second volume presents descriptions of ten specific cities selected from both the developed and developing worlds The thirteen chapters cover virtually all major urban regions of the world The state of the world

urbanization is presented and well documented Each chapter presents its unique account of its region's big city growth and the resulting impacts While I have yet to read the second volume this representative and well chosen collection of papers in Volume I suggests that I will be equally impressed All of the articles in this first volume are easily read by scholar and student alike and all those who read this work will be well informed in the socio cultural changes being generated and sometimes festered by the development of an increasingly global urban political economic system Journal of Developing Societies For those who have been waiting a long time for a substantive cross cultural resource in urban studies the wait is over In a two volume series Mattei Dogan and John D Kasarda have presented what surely is the most representative and scholarly collection of articles on world urbanization Easily read by scholar and student alike and all those who read this work will be well informed in the socio cultural changes being generated and sometimes festered by the development of an increasingly global urban political economic system Journal of Developing Societies A major contribution that both addresses the roles that giant cities play worldwide and provides useful detailed analysis of individual mega cities Both the breadth and depth of analysis are impressive as one would expect from the list of distinguished contributors The Metropolis Era would be of interest to all urban scholars Those with a more applied orientation such as scholars in urban and regional planning and schools of public affairs should also welcome the publication of these volumes W Parker Frisbie University of Texas Austin Libraries supporting programs in urban studies urban planning and comparative urbanization will need these two volumes in their collections One special feature of the second volume is that many of the essays have been prepared by specialists or coauthors who live in and study the cities whose problems they analyze which gives the essays more credibility Choice Needless to say these two volumes will be of universal interest to municipal officials of large cities who daily face the challenge of providing their citizens with services and amenities of incredible breadth and complexity Further they will find a ready audience among scholars and students of urban life And last but not least citizens who live in megalopolises as well as in small urban settlements and who might wish to know how other cities are coping with meeting the ever increasing needs of their ever growing population will find the books a source of stimulating information Planning and Administration The main virtue of this collection and it is an important one is that it substantively represents Third World Asian African and Latin American cities and communist bloc countries in addition to the West Contemporary Sociology Anyone interested in learning about the development of the world's largest cities and regions from an individual and comparative perspective will want to take a look at Dogan and Kasarda's two volume assessment of The Metropolis Era A World of Giant Cities Volume 1 and Mega Cities Volume 2 Cities The best global overview of urbanization available at this time Future Survey In terms of facts and ideas per dollar these volumes are a bargain They offer a substantive information about some of the world's giant cities and provocative suggestions regarding the ways urbanists might profitably think about such places individually and comparatively An international marketplace of ideas about cities and metropolitan areas is long overdue The editors are t be congratulated on a major and pioneering contribution to the development of such a marketplace and for allowing contributions latitude in selecting material appropriate to their cities and their perspectives Journal of Regional Science Well done Brings to the giant cities an abundance of information and reflections which are overall a contribution of great value in understanding urban affairs as well as contemporary social evolution This large work is without a doubt the best of its genre that is found on the market It has been put together well and unites an enormous mass of information and ideas on urban development Revue Francaise de Science Politique translated from the French These are remarkable volumes well organised thoughtful and informative seldom theoretical never boring easy to read and thought provoking Every chapter is somewhat different and has something new to say The ills and strengths of large cities are surveyed and analysed with lucidity this large work is of exceptional value and worth reading carefully Jean Gottmann in Town Planning Review A major contribution to the literature The overall impact of the books is an extremely challenging one they deserve to be read widely Urban Studies achieve s a breakthrough in analyzing and discussing urban problems within a cross cultural worldwide approach of collections of this kind this one is both more ambitious and more successful than most Given the direction in which urbanists and the world s cities are moving this book is helpful for sorting through issues with which we will be dealing more frequently Environment and Planning It is an interesting compilation with very much of value Habitat International given the concentration of information in these two volumes they will be an important source of information for students especially and to a lesser extent for municipal officials They will therefore constitute an important reference work for all types of students of urban life in large cities Canadian Journal of Latin Kasarda writes with authority and interest The individual city studies that comprise volume II are useful surveys of contemporary urban problems The Annals of Regional Science it is welcome to have comparative and up to date material on the common problems of large cities The value of these two volumes lies in collecting together disparate material on these large cities International Journa
