

I Love You More Than...

I love you more than you love me,
No that's not true I love you more than that.
I love you more than all the people in the world,
No that's not true I love you more than that.
I love you more than everything in the world,
No that's not true I love you more than that.
I love you to the moon and back,
No that's not true I love you more than that.
I love you from this galaxy to the next,

No that's not true I love you more than that.
I love you more than all the stars in the sky,
More than all the galaxies,
More than all the people and animals,
More than all the plants,
More than all the water,
More than all the distance,
More than all the knowledge,
More than all the art,
Yes that's true that's how much I love you.

Exile, Non-Belonging and Statelessness in Grangaud, Jabès, Lubin and Luca Greg Kerr, 2021-06-07 At least since the Romantic era poetry has often been understood as a powerful vector of collective belonging The idea that certain poets are emblematic of a national culture is one of the chief means by which literature historicizes itself inscribes itself in a shared cultural past and supplies modes of belonging to those who consume it But what then of the exiled migrant or translingual poet How might writing in a language other than one's mother tongue complicate this picture of the relation between poet language and literary system What of those for whom the practice of poetry is inseparable from a sense of restlessness or unease suggesting a condition of not being at home in any one language even that of their mother tongue These questions are crucial for four French language poets whose work is the focus of this study Armen Lubin 1903-74 Gh rasim Luca 1913-94 Edmond Jabès 1912-91 and Michelle Grangaud 1941 Ranging across borders within and beyond the Francosphere from Algeria to Armenia to Egypt to Romania this book shows how a poetic practice inflected by exile statelessness or non belonging has the potential to disrupt long held assumptions of the relation between subjects the language they use and the place from which they speak
