CHAPTER I TRAILING What the Outdoor World Can Do for Girls How to Find the Trail and How to Keep It There is a something in you as in every one every man woman girl and boy that requires the tonic life of the wild You may not know it many do not but there is a part of your nature that only the wild can reach satisfy and develop The much housed overheated overdressed and over entertained life of most girls is artificial and if one does not turn away from and leave it for a while one also becomes greatly artificial and must go through life not knowing the joy the strength the poise that real outdoor life can give What is it about a true woodsman that instantly compels our respect that sets him apart from the men who might be of his class in village or town and puts him in a class by himself though he may be exteriorly rough and have little or no book education The real Adirondack or the North Woods guide alert clean limbed clear eyed hard muscled bearing his pack basket or duffel bag on his back doing all the hard work of the camp never loses his poise or the simple dignity which he shares with all the things of the wild It is bred in him is a part of himself and the life he leads He is as conscious of his superior knowledge of the woods as an astronomer is of his knowledge of the stars and patiently tolerates the ignorance and awkwardness of the tenderfoot from the city Only a keen sense of humor can make this toleration possible for I have seen things done by a city dweller at camp that would enrage a woodsman unless the irresistibly funny side of it made him laugh his inward laugh that seldom reaches the surface A Girl's Year Book, 1917 Shakespeare on Prejudice B.
