Pursuit Evasion Differential Games:

Pursuit-Evasion Differential Games Y. Yavin, M. Pachter, 2014-06-28 Twenty papers are devoted to the treatment of a wide spectrum of problems in the theory and applications of dynamic games with the emphasis on pursuit evasion differential games The problem of capturability is thoroughly investigated also the problem of noise corrupted state measurements Attention is given to aerial combat problems and their attendant modelling issues such as variable speed of the combatants the three dimensionality of physical space and the combat problem i.e. problems related to role determination

PURSUIT-EVASION DIFFERENTIAL GAMES. John B. Berger, WASHINGTON UNIV ST LOUIS MO DEPT OF SYSTEMS MECHANICAL AND AEROSPACE ENGINEERING., 1968 Differential game theory is applied to several classes of pursuit evasion problems For these differential games the dynamics of the participants are described by linear nonstationary differential equations One class of differential games that was formulated and studied is the differential game where the evader has to out maneuver a pursuer if it is to strike the target that the pursuer is defending This differential game will be called the differential endgame The differential endgame's payoff functional is the square of the terminal engagement miss distance weighted against the difference of the participants control energies spent during their respective flight times The evader's target constraints are the position coordinates of the target and the evader's kinetic energy as it strikes the target

Author Pursuit-evasion differential games, 1989 Studies in Pursuit-evasion Differential Games Noboru Sugino, 1967 Pursuit-evasion Differential Games III M. Pachter, Yaakov Yavin, 1993 Multi-player Pursuit-evasion Differential Games Dongxu Li, 2006 Abstract The increasing use of autonomous assets in modern military operations has led to renewed interest in multi player Pursuit Evasion PE differential games However the current differential game theory in the literature is inadequate for dealing with this newly emerging situation The purpose of this dissertation is to study general PE differential games with multiple pursuers and multiple evaders in continuous time The current differential game theory is not applicable mainly because the terminal states of a multi player PE game are difficult to specify To circumvent this difficulty we solve a deterministic problem by an indirect approach starting with a suboptimal solution based on structured controls of the pursuers If the structure is set time consistent the resulting suboptimal solution can be improved by the optimization based on limited look ahead When the performance enhancement is applied iteratively an optimal solution can be approached in the limit We provide a hierarchical method that can determine a valid initial point for this iterative process The method is also extended to the stochastic game case For a problem where uncertainties only appear in the players dynamics and the states are perfectly measured the iterative method is largely valid For a more general problem where the players measurement is not perfect only a special case is studied and a suboptimal approach based on one step look ahead is discussed In addition to the numerical justification of the iterative method the theoretical soundness of the method is addressed for deterministic PE games under the framework of viscosity solution theory for Hamilton Jacobi equations

Conditions are derived for the existence of solutions of a multi player game Some issues on capturability are also discussed for the stochastic game case The fundamental idea behind the iterative approach is attractive for complicated problems When a direct solution is difficult an alternative approach is usually to search for an approximate solution and the possibility of serial improvements based on it The improvement can be systematic or random It is expected that an optimal solution can be approached in the long term Numerical Solutions for Pursuit-evasion Differential Games Aran Chompaisal,1978
