

The background of the book cover is a photograph of a stone tunnel. The tunnel is constructed from large, rough-hewn stone blocks. At the end of the tunnel, there is a window with a grid of panes, through which bright light is streaming, creating a strong contrast with the dimly lit interior. The floor of the tunnel is also made of stone and appears slightly uneven.

Making History Jorma Kalela, 2011-11-18 Everyone has a personal connection to the past independent of historical inquiry So what is the role of the historian Making History argues that historians have damagingly dissociated the discipline of history from the everyday nature of history defining their work only in scholarly terms Exploring the relationship between history and society Kalela makes the case for a more participatory historical research culture in which historians take account of their role in society and the ways in which history making as a basic social practice is present in their work Making History not only asks provocative questions about the role of the historian it also provides practical guidance for students and historians on planning research projects with greater public impact This book is vital reading for all historians lay and professional and will be an essential text for undergraduate and postgraduate courses on historiography and research methods

Problems associated with African history. Orality as a source James Pinnock, 2018-02-27 Essay from the year 2010 in the subject History Africa grade 80 0% language English abstract History according to E H Carr cannot be written unless the historian can achieve some kind of contact with those about whom he is writing Throughout the pursuit of history we search for a link between the past and the present and that almost definitively arrives in the form of written sources However how should we approach history when written sources elude us and all we have to rely on for the most part are oral sources and tradition A nature that certainly defines the so called acephalous societies of pre colonial Africa and to a lesser extent contemporary Africa Orality is not seen in modern scholarship admittedly dominated by Western and Europeanized thought as a viable or reliable source for constructing history Yet does this orality consign Africa to the peripheries of history to the wastelands of historical thought and theory Is Africa as Hugh Trevor Roper once claimed unhistoric This essay will examine whether oral sources are a sufficient foundation for the history of a continent and whether their innate weaknesses and flaws as a source indeed render them as previously believed inadequate for such a venture Of paramount importance in this essay is to assess whether a history of Africa can survive within the ideas of what History is and should be ideas ultimately Western indeed European in their conception Or can we separate Africa from Europe both in terms of colonial impact and historical theory and create a purely Africanist history Hence by the end of this essay I hope to have displayed that oral sources have value within themselves as a source for history and that the constraints of European history need not necessarily apply to Africa Perhaps then Africa can be resurrected from the graveyard of academic publishing The New Atheist Denial of

History B. Painter, 2014-11-19 This compact forcefully argued work calls Sam Harris Richard Dawkins Steven Pinker and the rest of the so called New Atheists to account for failing to take seriously the historical record to which they so freely appeal when attacking religion The popularity of such books as Harris s The End of Faith Dawkins s The God Delusion and Christopher Hitchens God Is Not Great set off a spate of reviews articles and books for and against yet in all the controversy little attention has focused on the historical evidence and arguments they present to buttress their case This book is the first to challenge in depth the distortions of this New Atheist history It presents the evidence that the three authors and their allies ignore It points out the lack of historical credibility in their work when judged by the conventional criteria used by mainstream historians It does not deal with the debate over theism and atheism nor does it aim to defend the historical record of Christianity or religion more generally It does aim to defend the integrity of history as a discipline in the face of its distortion by those who violate it

History and Economic Life Georg Christ, Philipp R. Rössner, 2020-02-27 History and Economic Life offers students a wide ranging introduction to both quantitative and qualitative approaches to interpreting economic history sources from the Middle Ages to the Twentieth Century Having identified an ever widening gap between the use of qualitative sources by cultural historians and quantitative sources by economic historians the book aims to bridge the divide by making economic history sources more accessible to students and the wider public and highlighting the need for a complementary rather than exclusive approach Divided into two parts the book begins by equipping students with a toolbox to approach economic history sources considering the range of sources that might be of use and introducing different ways of approaching them The second part consists of case studies that examine how economic historians use such sources helping readers to gain a sense of context and understanding of how these sources can be used The book thereby sheds light on important debates both within and beyond the field and highlights the benefits gained when combining qualitative and quantitative approaches to source analysis Introducing sources often avoided in culturally minded history or statistically minded economic history courses respectively and advocating a combined quantitative and qualitative approach it is an essential resource for students undertaking source analysis within the field

Australian Soldiers in South Africa and Vietnam Effie Karageorgos, 2016-03-24 The South African and Vietnam Wars provoked dramatically different reactions in Australians from pro British jingoism on the eve of Federation to the anti war protest movements of the 1960s In contrast the letters and diaries of Australian soldiers written while on the South African and Vietnam battlefields reveal that their reactions to the war they were fighting were surprisingly unlike those on the home fronts from which they came Australian Soldiers in South Africa and Vietnam follows these combat men from enlistment to the war front and analyses their words alongside theories of soldiering to demonstrate the transformation of soldiers as a response to developments in military procedure as well as changing civilian opinion In this way the book illustrates the strength of a soldier's link to their home front lives

History Matters Judith M. Bennett, 2010-11-24 Written for everyone interested in women's and gender history History Matters reaffirms the importance to feminist theory and activism of long term historical perspectives Judith M Bennett who has been commenting on developments in women's and gender history since the 1980s argues that the achievement of a more feminist future relies on a rich plausible and well informed knowledge of the past and she asks her readers to consider what sorts of feminist history can best advance the struggles of the twenty first century Bennett takes as her central problem the growing chasm between feminism and history Closely allied in the 1970s each has now moved away from the other Seeking to narrow this gap Bennett proposes that feminist historians turn their attention to the intellectual challenges posed by the persistence of patriarchy She posits a patriarchal equilibrium whereby despite many changes in women's experiences over past centuries women's status vis vis that of men has remained remarkably unchanged Although for example women today find employment in occupations unimaginable to medieval women medieval and modern women have both encountered the same wage gap earning on average only three fourths of the wages earned by men Bennett argues that the theoretical challenge posed by this patriarchal equilibrium will be best met by long term historical perspectives that reach back well before the modern era In chapters focused on women's work and lesbian sexuality Bennett demonstrates the contemporary relevance of the distant past to feminist theory and politics She concludes with a chapter that adds a new twist the challenges of textbooks and classrooms to viewing women's history from a distance and with feminist intent A new manifesto History Matters engages forthrightly with the challenges faced by feminist historians today It argues for the radical potential of a history that is focused on feminist issues aware of the distant past attentive to continuities over time and alert to the workings of patriarchal power
