using harm reduction as a metatheory to guide qualitative interviews strengthens the use and acceptance of harm reduction and the application of constructs within health theories Through analysis of in depth interviews with respective participants at risk motorcyclists which are informed by harm reduction metatheory the authors examine how this unique approach to interviewing can be used to link metatheory theory methodology and ultimately application and translation of research results Metatheory and Interviewing culminates with a discussion of how the way we conduct and analyze interviews facilitates a deeper more intimate conversation with research participants by encouraging them to incorporate the same overarching harm reduction framework to provide feedback about changing specific health behaviors Scholars of health communication and research will understand the critical role of a humanistic attitude and pragmatic communication with participants as well as the importance of further extrapolating these strategies to their broader target audience
