Kane,Robert L. Kane,Richard C. Ladd,1998 Long term care in the United States has taken the nursing home as its benchmark but the monetary social and psychological costs of nursing home care are all too high This book challenges the current dominance of nursing homes as the principal institution of long term care It offers a series of alternative models where both services and housing can be provided in a way that allows long term consumers to enjoy dignified normal lifestyles It addresses the political and economic consequences of making this decision The authors start with the premise that long term care is designed to assist people who lack the capacity to function fully independently They argue that no disabled person of any age should be required to forsake his her humanity in exchange for care The book rejects the artificial dichotomy between social and medical care asserting that both play important roles in psychological and physical well being of long term care patients The authors consider the need for competent and compassionate medicine and discuss the methods for improving both its coordination of care and its effectiveness The book redefines the meaning of safety and protection in long term care and how this goal can be accomplished without sacrificing quality of living As the new millennium and the aging of baby boomers approaches more creative approaches to providing better long term care are required This volume outlines a useful framework for the provision of effective and humane community based programs that are both feasible and affordable It will be an invaluable guide for geriatricians public health professionals family physicians nurses and others who care for elderly patients      The Culture of Long Term Care J Neil Henderson,Maria D. Vesperi,1995-08-30 This is the only collection of its kind to offer an inside view of life and work in contemporary nursing homes with the purpose of developing a theory of the culture of long term care The anthropological research in nursing homes presented here produces a seldom seen native view of patients staff and the day to day workings of American nursing homes The use of ethnographic methods penetrates the reality barriers found in industry descriptions muck raking discourse and general societal aversion toward nursing homes The tensions found between and within staff culture and patient culture are explored in terms of adaptations to institutional life in the context of current policy and the larger American ageist culture      Consumer Guide to Long-term Care Gary Ilminen,1999 The clear concise and easy to follow format provides critical information needed to make difficult decisions A must read for adult children of the elderly and anyone working in long term care Pamela M Mokler gerontologist Author lectures      Quality of Life in Long-term Care Dorothy H.

Coons, Nancy L. Mace, Terry Whyte, 1996 Quality of Life in Long Term Care provides long term care professionals and persons responsible for training staff at long term care facilities with guidelines for developing a quality of life that enables elderly persons even those physically or mentally challenged to achieve life satisfaction and to live with dignity. Readers learn of concepts and methods for implementing change through staff training, a supportive management style, the development of appropriate activities, and the ongoing evaluation of outcomes. While the focus of Quality of Life in Long Term Care is on the psychosocial aspects of long term care, Authors Dorothy Coons and Nancy Mace also recognize and emphasize the need for excellent medical care and a therapeutic physical environment. They give administrators very specific examples of ways to develop a quality of life that enables even the very impaired to live with dignity. In helping long term care facility administrators and staff trainers, the authors show how to support staff development so the staff becomes friends and therapists rather than simply caretakers. The training methods presented provide ways to help staff better understand and empathize with elderly residents. Readers will find that these effective staff training and management practices help to greatly reduce staff turnover. Chapters in Quality of Life in Long Term Care describe facilities which provide individuality, opportunities for choice, social stimulation, and continuity of lifestyle for elderly people who live in retirement homes, nursing homes, or special dementia units. These examples are from facilities which have brought about change despite limitations including financial problems, structural restrictions, and staffing problems. Other topics covered which help long term care facility administration and staff provide a superior quality of life for their residents include criteria for creating a health fostering and therapeutic environment in long term care settings, management styles and methods that help staff achieve success, specific training topics and methods to help staff understand the needs of the elderly, activities and opportunities that can enrich long term care environments, an instrument designed to measure quality of life. Health care specialists, long term care facility administrators, nurses, occupational activity and recreational therapists, designers and developers of special dementia units, policy planners in long term care, and academicians in gerontology and long term care will refer to Quality of Life in Long Term Care repeatedly as they strive to provide residents with a good quality of life and a nurturing environment.

Handbook of Long-Term Care Administration and Policy Cynthia Massie Mara, Laura Olson, 2008-03-27 Attitudes toward long term care contain a strong residue of negativity in today's society and current problems with the system augment such perceptions. Unless dealt with now, this will only get worse as the 85 and older crowd is the fastest growing part of the population and the first wave of Baby Boomers is approaching 60. Exploring and delineating Infection Management for Geriatrics in Long-Term Care Facilities Thomas T. Yoshikawa, Joseph G. Ouslander, 2002-06-14 Contains the most recent guidelines to evaluate fever and infection in residents of long term care environments. Infection Management for Geriatrics in Long Term Care Facilities provides numerous figures and tables for quick access to key concepts, presents methods to establish infection control programs. The Long-Term Care Legal Desk Reference Barbara Acello, 2006 Leisure and Aging Heather Julie Gibson, Jerome F. Singleton, 2012 Leisure and Aging Theory and Practice provides students and professionals with a balanced perspective of current knowledge as it presents cutting edge research in both fields. Supplemented by online ancillaries this text offers a wealth of knowledge on various aspects of life for older people and the role of leisure in their lives.

Long-Term Care Reforms in OECD Countries Cristiano Gori, Jose-Luis Fernandez, Raphael Wittenberg, 2016-06-01 Since the early 1990s long term care policies have undergone significant transformations across OECD countries. In some countries these changes have responded to the introduction of major policy reforms while in others significant transformations have come about through the accumulation of incremental policy changes. The book brings together evidence from over 15 years of care reform to examine changes in long term care systems occurring in OECD countries. It discusses and compares key changes in national policies and examines the main successes and failures of recent reforms. Finally it suggests possible policy strategies for the future in the sector. With contributions from a wide range of experts across OECD countries this book is essential reading for academics, researchers and policy makers in the field of long term care policy.

Geropsychological Interventions in Long-Term Care Lee Hyer, PhD, ABPP, Robert C. Intrieri, PhD, 2006-02-22 Older people are entering nursing homes later and sicker than ever before thus presenting as more physically fragile and complex residents and requiring more advanced care and treatment. To this end Hyer and Intrieri have gathered together a group of health care professionals who are genuinely dedicated to the care and research of long term care LTC environments. This group seeks to push the envelope for improved use of professional time effort and input and in this remarkable book share their ideas with you. By applying the Selective Optimization with Compensation SOC model to various care settings the editors are able to examine current LTC practices and existing psychosocial issues confronting older LTC patients either support or challenge them and offer suggestions and strategies such as Cognitive Behavior Therapy for improving the LTC system and residents' physical, psychological, emotional and social health. This book provides insight on the psychological issues facing long term care residents for a plethora of health care professionals including Physicians and geriatricians who care for older adults in the LTC system, Nurses and geriatric nurse specialists, Social workers, Activity coordinators, Physical, occupational and speech therapists within an LTC setting who are seeking ways to explain behavior and empower the residents they care for, Psychologists and psychiatrists whose practice focuses on older adults.

Long-Term Care in an Aging Society Graham D. Rowles, 2015-08-13 This comprehensive graduate textbook focuses on the full spectrum of long term care settings ranging from family and community based care through supportive housing options to a variety of institutional long term care alternatives.
