Morel Tales The Culture Of Mushrooming:

Morel Tales Gary Alan FINE, Gary Alan Fine, 2009-06-30 In this thoughtful book Gary Fine explores how Americans attempt to give meaning to the natural world that surrounds them Although nature has often been treated as an unproblematic reality Fine suggests that the meanings we assign to the natural environment are culturally grounded In other words there is no nature separate from culture He calls this process of cultural construction and interpretation naturework Of course there is no denying the biological reality of trees mountains earthquakes and hurricanes but he argues they must be interpreted to be made meaningful Fine supports this claim by examining the fascinating world of mushrooming Based on three years of field research with mushroomers at local and national forays Morel Tales highlights the extensive range of meanings that mushrooms have for mushroomers Fine details how mushroomers talk about their finds turning their experiences into fish stories the one that got away war stories and treasure tales how mushroomers routinely joke about dying from or killing others with misidentified mushrooms and how this dark humor contributes to the sense of community among collectors He also describes the sometimes friendly sometimes tense relations between amateur mushroom collectors and professional mycologists Fine extends his argument to show that the elaboration of cultural meanings found among mushroom collectors is equally applicable to birders butterfly collectors rock hounds and other naturalists Morel Tales

Gary Alan Fine, 2003 Ecology and Management of Morels Harvested from the Forests of Western North America, 2007 Morels are prized edible mushrooms that fruit sometimes prolifically in many forest types throughout western North America They are collected for personal consumption and commercially harvested as valuable special nontimber forest products Large gaps remain however in our knowledge about their taxonomy biology ecology cultivation safety and how to manage forests and harvesting activities to conserve morel populations and ensure sustainable crops This publication provides forest managers policymakers mycologists and mushroom harvesters with a synthesis of current knowledge regarding these issues regional summaries of morel harvesting and management and a comprehensive review of the literature Planting With Purpose Stephen Ellingson, 2024-03-19 Examines local food movement activism in a period of increasing climate chaos and neoliberal crisis economic inequalities and political divisions In the face of numerous challenges small scale farming for local markets requires enormous courage and optimism The decision to become a farmer often arises from a profound desire to uphold certain values and beliefs driven by the moral and emotional motivations to contribute to a greater good Central New York's local food market draws a unique cohort of individuals who see farming as more than just a livelihood it is a way to define a good life and contribute to the well being of the society they cherish Their moral order revolves around shared beliefs in sustainability and stewardship of the land emphasizing health and risk management cooperation over competition and a deep sense of justice For these farmers relationships and family ties are foundational to their work creating a strong sense of community within the local food system This book delves into the captivating world of local food markets in a Rust Belt region of the state where 51 individuals representing 45 different farms restaurants agricultural non profits and local food retailers share their inspiring stories through conversations and interviews Author Stephen Ellingson explores the intricate web of moral commitments self understandings and emotional experiences that drive and sustain small scale farming for the local food market By amplifying the voices of these unsung heroes it gives recognition to the crucial role they play in society and offers important insights into the values that underpin their contributions to the local food system

How Places Make Us Japonica Brown-Saracino,2018 Maybe we've had enough of studies of gay men and urban centers tracing out the similarities from one place to the next Japonica Brown Saracino bucks the trend giving us the first in depth study of lesbians and bisexual queer women more generally showing how four contrasting communal cultures have shaped their identity Individual lesbian residents shape the culture of sexual identity they embrace based at the same time on the prevailing culture in the city they inhabit And the consequence is that the same woman will develop a different version of lesbian identity depending on which of the four cities she moves into Those cities are Ithaca New York San Luis Obispo California Greenfield Massachusetts and Portland Maine She identifies them in the book a rare move for ethnographers thus insuring a coast to coast readership with lots of debate This book advances in almost equal measure sexuality and gender studies theories of identity theories of place and urban sociology Each city has its own loose bundles or connections between residents whether it's the taste based ties in Ithaca or the ties in San Luis Obispo that cut across demographics or the conversations about identity that prevail in Portland or the emphasis Greenfield on other dimensions of the self e.g. profession politics or life stage such as motherhood Along the way Brown Saracino poses a set of questions from urban sociology about migration residential choice and community change processes that students of cities rarely apply to sexual minority populations
