Voices in my head,
Chanting, 'Kisses. Bread.
Prove yourself. Fight. Shove.
Learn. Earn. Look for love,'

Drown a lesser voice,
Silent now of choice:
'Breathe in peace, and be
Still, for once, like me.'

Selected Poems Hélène Aji,Jennifer Kilgore-Caradec,2013-01-16 Complete poems are bulky and too heavy to carry around Collected poems pretend to be complete but usually are not Selected poems are altogether unpretentious and reader friendly But they can be problematic Who decides what poems are important for inclusion in a volume of selected poems When the selection occurs during the author s lifetime may one assume that the author was involved What motivates the choice of one poem over another How do readers preferences influence this choice How do new readers and familiar readers of a poet negotiate the poems that are left out of the selection The essays in this volume address these questions in a variety of ways and also provide an overview of poetic writing from modernist poets to the present day using selections from the 1940s until now They offer new insight into the uses both pedagogical and critical of selection Because Selected Poems usually address a large general public these essays have also been written for all those who wish to know more about how these slimmer more attractive volumes are produced

Six Poets from the Mountain South John Lang, 2010-04-20
 In the most extensive work to date on major poets from the mountain South, John Lang takes as his point of departure an oft-quoted remark by Jim Wayne Miller: Appalachian literature is and has always been as decidedly worldly, secular and profane in its outlook as the region's traditional religion appears to be spiritual and otherworldly. Although this statement may be accurate for Miller's own poetry and fiction, Lang maintains that it does not do justice to the pervasive religious and spiritual concerns of many of the mountain South's finest writers, including the five other leading poets whose work he analyzes along with Miller's: Fred Chappell, Robert Morgan, Jeff Daniel Marion, Kathryn Stripling Byer, and Charles Wright. Lang demonstrates all write poetry that explores, sometimes with widely varying results, what they see as the undeniable presence of the divine within the temporal world. Like Blake and Emerson before them, these poets find the supernatural within nature rather than beyond it. They all exhibit a love of place in their poems, a strong sense of connection to nature and the land, especially the mountains. Yet while their affirmation of the world before them suggests a resistance to the otherworldliness that Miller points to, their poetry is nonetheless permeated with spiritual questing. Dante strongly influences both Chappell and Wright, though the latter eventually resigns himself to being simply a God-fearing agnostic, whereas Chappell follows Dante in celebrating the love that moves the sun and other stars. Byer, probably the least orthodox of these poets, chooses to lay up treasures on earth, rejecting the transcendent in favor of a Native American spirituality of immanence, while Morgan and Marion find in nature what Marion calls a vocabulary of wonders akin to Emerson's conviction that nature is the language of the spiritual. Employing close readings of the poets' work and relating it to British and American Romanticism as well as contemporary eco-theology and eco-criticism, Lang's book is the most ambitious and searching foray yet into the worlds of these renowned post-World War II Appalachian poets.

Situating their work within the theoretical framework of prioritizing community strengths, each set of authors provides a detailed and nuanced description of a teacher education program re-positioned within an urban school or community Authors describe the process of developing such a relationship how the university school and community became integrated partners in the program and the impact on participants As university based teacher education has come under increased scrutiny for lack of real world relevance this book showcases programs that have successfully navigated the travails of shifting their base directly into urban schools and communities with evidence of positive outcomes for all involved
