Ericson, 1979 Religious Folk Art in America C. Kurt Dewhurst, Betty MacDowell, Marsha MacDowell, Museum of American Folk Art, 1983 A Gust for Paradise Diane Kelsey McColley, 1993 This beautifully illustrated multidisciplinary study addresses interpretations of the Genesis creation story in Paradise Lost and other seventeenth century English poems and in the visual arts from the Middle Ages through the Reformation It considers poems visual images and music concerned with divine and human creativity and interprets these works as salutary examples for the creation of the arts and the preservation of the earth The central topic is the daily work of body or mind of Adam and Eve in Paradise Lost as primal artists and caretakers of nature before the Fall developing the arts of language music liturgy and government discovering the rudiments of a technology harmless to the biosphere and dressing and keeping a garden that is an epitome of the whole earth These unfallen arts promote awareness of the complex harmonies of creation and potentially of civilization an awareness that is not only linear or binary but radiant and multiple not only monodic but also choral McColley argues that northern European visual artists and seventeenth century English poets reimagined Eden in order to re Edenize the imagination as a source of ethical and ecological healing The best known depictions of Adam and Eve in the visual arts which focus on the drama of the fall depart from a widespread but undervalued tradition that more celebratory and regenerative and less susceptible to misogynous interpretation This tradition includes the neglected topos of original righteousness and contributes to what we would now call ecological awareness Poets allied to this view foster Edenic consciousness by creating a Paradisal language that weaves form sound image metaphor concept and experience as closely as nature weaves life and so exercises our sense of connections

States has triggered an intense popular interest in mediated Christianity and prompted the traditional churches to reexamine their own policies toward mass communication. The ensuing dramatic increase in the number of studies on the subject has prompted a corresponding need for a comprehensive index of valuable materials. Christian Communication is the first wide ranging annotated bibliography of available books, articles, theses, and dissertations in English, French, German, Spanish, and Italian that deals with all forms and aspects of Christian communication, even comic books and the computer. The bibliographies for this collection were drawn from several sources including the Library of Congress, several important computerized databases, manual searches of such institutions as the Billy Graham Center and the Graduate Theological Union, among others, and references in dissertations. Most importantly, only accessible items which could be checked and reviewed by Soukup and his research staff have been included here. The volume is arranged to maximize ease of access and use and is based on the general academic division of communication studies. The first chapter contains an introduction cross referenced to the bibliographies that reviews the history of church communication, the major issues that characterize it, and suggests possibilities for future study. Next, a resource chapter lists periodicals which address specific areas of religious communication or frequently published articles of interest, cites bibliographic guides to the material, and surveys directories of both personnel working in the field of Christian communication and of catalogs of relevant materials. The following seven chapters contain the major bibliographical sections that review communication theory, history, rhetoric, interpersonal communication, mass communication, intercultural communication, and other media. The volume closes with helpful name, title, and subject indexes that make this guide thoroughly user friendly and an important research tool for church communicators, theological students, and communications scholars working in philosophical or qualitative areas.
