The Ecological Crisis and the Logic of Capital Xueming Chen, 2017-09-11 The worsening environmental crisis has become a serious threat to mankind The search for a solution to this crisis must begin by understanding its causes Taking an eco socialist perspective The Ecological Crisis and the Logic of Capital explores the logic of capitalism as a fundamental cause of today's environmental crisis in particular the thirst for profit and the capitalist mode of production By demonstrating the inherent antagonism between capital and ecology this book argues that proposals to resolve the crisis within the capitalist system are utopian that proposed remedies relying on scientific progress alternative energies low carbon technologies or the introduction of ecological ethics and new attitudes toward Nature into market mechanisms are doomed to failure without a radical overhaul of the principles that govern capitalism

Middle-Income Trap Zhijie Zheng, 2020-09-21 This book explores the essence of the middle income trap based on two major perspectives namely economic transformation and social transformation China has experienced high speed economic growth for nearly 40 years since the adoption of the Reform and Opening policies However China's economic growth has been slowing down significantly in recent years Has China tumbled into the middle income trap This book reveals the essence of the middle income trap is that a country's economic growth is facing a double squeeze in the middle income stage while the social structure and system are unsuitable for the new social development stage which leads to economic stagnation or recession and the aggravation of social contradictions that is the double predicament of economic transformation and social transformation This judgment is of great value for understanding the problems encountered in the current development of China

Central Government's Communication and Engagement with Local Government Great Britain. National Audit Office, 2012 This report recognises that now more than ever it is essential that central government communicates and engages well with local government Responsibilities such as public health are moving to local government local authorities are playing a vital role in the Government's decentralisation agenda and substantial reductions in staff are causing pressure It is clear that there is goodwill on both sides however the organisational differences between central and local government make communication very challenging Where departments are designing services for local delivery the operational experience of local authorities is important to the effective design and implementation of programmes The NAO's work across government has also demonstrated that not consulting local delivery partners early brings a high risk of waste and optimism bias that can result in the failure of programmes Some policy consultations are rushed Departments also issue a disproportionate number of consultations just before parliamentary recess and holiday periods making it difficult to co-ordinate their work on them Though most individual communications between central and local government are of good quality there are so many that poor ones can still have a significant impact Departments standards for and oversight of their communications with local government are not systematic enough to eliminate the risk of some poor communications slipping through Local authorities are also exasperated by the poor targeting of emails to relevant audiences wasting the time of the hundreds of people who receive each one This is of particular concern to local authority managers working with fewer staff following cost reductions
