Abstract:

Urban areas are the heart of tourist movements in the world nowadays. Urban tourism contributes to the development of urban areas. Urban centres are the most significant users of resources and energy in rural areas and producers of waste and all forms of pollution. Since cities are complex systems, the concept of smart cities was developed to contribute to the infrastructural arrangement of the city, a cleaner, more sustainable environment, and thus a better quality of life for citizens. The research aims to show how important it is to apply the concept of smart cities to improve the competitiveness of urban tourist destinations. The study was conducted with respect to Copenhagen. A case study methodology reveals influential factors that make urban tourism based on smart city concepts competitive. The research contributes to improving urban tourism competitiveness and initiating smart city projects. Smart and sustainable city projects are strongly recommended.

Keywords:

sustainable urban development, tourism attractiveness, smart city project, Copenhagen.

INTRODUCTION

As one of the oldest and most significant civilizational phenomena in the evolution of human society, the city has always attracted people to live, work, visit and use its contents. The development of cities throughout history, increase in mobility, and change in lifestyle of citizens over the last few decades and global directions of sustainable tourism development have contributed to urban centres becoming attractive tourist destinations. As a form of tourism that contributes to urban areas' development, urban tourism turned into sustainable urban tourism as a necessity in compliance with global sustainable development objectives. City policymakers face water use, energy efficiency, waste management, and mobility challenges due to accelerated urbanization, dilapidated infrastructure, rapid population growth, and climate change. Moreover, they are faced with the possibility of significant tourism revenues, mainly if they have supported the strengthening of this sector over a long period. The New Urban Agenda, a roadmap for the construction of cities adopted by world leaders, is a global standard for sustainable urban development. With technical and financial support from international partners, national governments and local authorities implement the Agenda.

Quality Management In Urban Tourism:

Quality Management in Urban Tourism Peter E. Murphy, 1997-02-12 Quality Management in Urban Tourism is the first book to introduce the concept of quality management to urban tourism. It brings together theoretical and case study contributions from leaders in the field both in academic research and tourism management. Quality Management in Urban Tourism Peter E. Murphy, 1997

Urban Tourism in the Developing World Christian Myles Rogerson, Gustav Visser, Over the past decade the field of urban tourism has consolidated with the appearance of several books that concentrate upon the Western European and North American experience. Recently the scope and range of urban research has widened considerably including the welcome appearance of studies that examine the tourism phenomenon in cities outside the Euro American heartland. Despite this growing international body of debate and scholarship on tourism and cities particularly in the developed North literature that relates to the developing world as a whole and to Africa in particular remains sparse. The task of Urban Tourism in the Developing World: The South African Experience is to augment the current international scholarship concerning urban tourism in the developing world. More especially the contributors draw attention to a range of case studies from South Africa that provide some starting points to address the uneven scholarly coverage of urban tourism in the African context. This collection has received to date. In addition the research material presented here seeks to contribute toward raising the South African and indeed the African profile within growing international scholarship concerning issues of urban tourism and development. This collection aims to expand an emerging South African and African tourism research voice concerning the tourism and development nexus as well as to stem critiques that this body of research appears to have developed in a theoretical vacuum divorced from broader international tourism research discourses. This collection of essays not only further develops an independent South African tourism perspective but also presents research that is closely tied to international urban tourism research debates. In addition this analysis of urban tourism in the South African context enriches the rather Western oriented theories of urban tourism discourse through its emphasis on how urban tourism is evolving in urban Africa. Christian M. Rogerson is professor of human geography in the School of Geography, Archaeology and Environmental Studies, University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, South Africa. Gustav Visser is senior lecturer in human geography in the Department of Geography, University of the Free State, Bloemfontein, South Africa.

Understanding Urban Tourism Martin Selby, 2003-12-18 Despite the formidable growth of urban tourism there has been little of the critical engagement that one would expect from the social sciences. The rich potential of contemporary social science for urban tourism has yet to be realized. Martin Selby's textbook makes available to practitioners and students seeking to understand the phenomenon of tourism in towns and cities the methods and concepts that are currently enhancing and transforming our understanding of society in other areas of the social sciences With an emphasis on image culture and experience the author draws upon the cultural turn to explain the human aspects of the urban tourism phenomenon The discussions emphasize the significance of urban tourism within debates upon the contemporary city postmodernity and the pursuit of social science Clearly written with case studies and further reading this book should be welcomed by students and lecturers in geography tourism planning and sociology Quality Management in Urban Tourism University of Victoria (B.C.).
