large scale research project in biology cooperation in the life sciences has a longer history A comparison between centralised big physics and big biology reveals how the latter has a networked structure which evolved in interaction with the integration of information and communication technologies By concentrating on the construction of these networks three contemporary large scale research collaborations are analysed the Census of Marine Life that aims to make an inventory of life in the oceans the Silicon Cell initiative that wants to design a replica of a cell in a computer and the VIRGO consortium which investigates host virus interaction to develop a new therapy against influenza This book demonstrates how the process of making science bigger or the supersizing of science transforms the ways in which science is organised while it also changes the work of scientists involved As such this has both scholarly and professional implications for the next generation of scientists

Running in the Red Irene S. Rubin, 1983-06-30 This case study of a politically reformed middle sized Midwestern city provides a model of fiscal stress that contrasts sharply with that of America's vast metropolitan centers Dr Rubin examines the interaction of social political and economic causes of the city's predicament She then goes on to analyze the specific factors that solved the city's problems over a six year period Finally she offers a self correcting mechanism that would allow a city to save itself from financial trouble without direct state or federal assistance This study suggests that local political factors were even more important than national factors in contributing to the city's fiscal stress It also brings into question the theory that generosity to the poor creates urban fiscal stress and that giving less to the poor will solve urban financial problems

The New Urban Reality Paul E. Peterson, 2001-06-07 America's inner cities particularly those in older industrial metropolitan areas have declined sharply in both population and employment over the past two decades How much of this change is due to technological advances in transportation communication and manufacturing How much of it is due to the changing racial composition of the central cities Can any set of public policies retard or reverse the decline of the industrial cities This book presents an interdisciplinary collection of papers addressing these questions In the introduction editor Paul E Peterson discusses the ways in which adverse economic and racial changes interact and urges more realistic federal policies to counteract these changes In Part I The Processes of Urban Growth and Decline sociologist John D Kasarda analyzes the growing mismatch between inner city jobs and residents and geographer Brian J L Berry discusses the economics of inner city gentrification Racial change is the subject of Part II sociologist Elijah Anderson depicts race relations in a gentrifying inner city neighborhood sociologist William J Wilson delineates the social and economic problems of inner city blacks and political scientist Gary Orfield calls for bold efforts to reverse the continuing urban pattern of racial segregation Part III looks at the way cities have responded to economic and racial change Economist Kenneth A Small discusses the impact of transportation policy political scientist Herbert Jacob finds that increasing efforts to control urban crime have not been effective and sociologist Terry Nichols Clark emphasizes the effect of political factors on the fiscal condition of cities Economist Anthony Downs reviewing the issues raised by the other authors sees little hope for racial integration as the central social strategy for solving urban problems but does see hope in the internal resources of America's minority communities
