Management of Prostate Cancer Eric A. Klein, 2004-05-07 Although much progress has been made in the four years since the first edition of Management of Prostate Cancer, prostate cancer remains a significant biological, medical, and personal challenge for millions of men. In this interval, some important trends and observations have emerged that represent real progress in the field and which will shape the direction of clinical practice and research in the next 5-10 years. These observations include: 1 a decline in prostate related cancer mortality in the United States, likely owing to a combination of factors including screening, more aggressive and earlier therapy, and improvements in specific therapies; 2 a significant downward pathological stage migration so that an individual's chance of cure for a given stage grade and PSA is better now than it was early in the PSA era, even without associated improvements in individual therapies; 3 the recognition of new PSA isoforms that may refine screening strategies; 4 several randomized phase III clinical trials demonstrating survival advantages of one form of therapy over another in selected populations: external beam radiotherapy with adjuvant hormones vs radiotherapy alone, radical prostatectomy vs observation; 5 a focus on the biology of bone and bone metastasis and new agents that reduce skeletal related events and which may inhibit the growth of new metastases; 6 second generation anti PSMA antibodies with improved potential for imaging and therapy; 7 the development and widespread adoption of nomograms that assist in clinical decision making for individual patients; 8 the identification of new genes that intended for Newly diagnosed patients Patients who have failed primary treatments Patients with urinary and sexual side effects Family members A Multidisciplinary Analysis of Controversies in the Management of Prostate Cancer Donald S. Coffey, 2012-12-06 These proceedings emanate from the Second Prostate Neck Conference on prostate cancer held on October 17-19, 1986, the theme of which was treatment with focus on current issues and future research that is needed to answer critical questions related to optimal management of the various stages of prostate cancer. The objective was to reveal the most crucial problems impeding progress and to crystallize the combined multidisciplinary input generated by the conference into focused concepts or recommendations for presentation to the National Cancer Institute (NCI) with the ultimate intent of targeting research to address the priority issues identified. In organizing the workshop, every effort was made to maintain a multidisciplinary balance among nationally renowned authorities on prostate cancer. Thus, leading surgeons, radiation and medical oncologists, and biostatisticians were in equal presence. While there were spirited exchanges with careful scrutiny and critique of all data presented, there was a common belief that the challenge of prostate cancer would be best approached in this multidisciplinary, organ systems-oriented fashion. During the course of the conference, it became apparent to all present that major nomenclature and procedural barriers have made it generally difficult and frequently impossible to compare results of clinical research.

Among the other therapies discussed are LHRH agonists and antagonists, cabazitaxel, radium-223, and various novel agents still under clinical trials. The section on surgical approaches addresses, among other topics, the use of robot-assisted radical prostatectomy, pelvic lymphadenectomy, and the benefits of adjuvant and neoadjuvant therapy. The current role of external beam radiotherapy alone or in combination with ADT and brachytherapy for locally advanced disease is reviewed. Management of Advanced Prostate Cancer will be a valuable resource for practitioners at all levels of expertise.
