Complaint Management and Internal Marketing

Malte Kempen,2009-01-05 Inhaltsangabe Introduction The first chapter gives a introduction into the topic and explains how the whole work is structured before the key subjects in chapter two will be discussed Okay Sir I will put you through to someone else Does this sound familiar Trying to switch to a different contract with a cell phone operator but nobody seems to be qualified to handle a request Dissatisfaction arises and the customer would like to report his problem On the one hand the customer experiences a breakdown in service and on the other hand a second disappointment may follow if a service provider fails to handle the grievance after it is stated The question arises as to why complaint handling is important nowadays Complaint handling is not as selfless an act by a company as it may seem A complaint is the cheapest most honest and most qualitative form of management consulting there is according to market research into sales force by Pawlik Sales Consultants AG Companies should not be afraid to face feedback and complaints According to the Treasury Board of Canada Research suggests that relatively few dissatisfied clients bother to complain As a result every complaint received may provide a window into a much larger pool of dissatisfaction By dealing with the causes of complaints the organization can further reduce both the number of complaints and dissatisfaction with its program delivery or service Complaint management is a tool to prevent the migration of customers to competitors and more and more companies understand that simply recruiting new customers is not sufficient As a consequence intensification of defensive marketing in contrast to offensive marketing actions becomes more interesting to a company The aim of defensive marketing should be the development of long lasting customer relations For example Volvo Saab the Swedish automobile manufacturer estimates that the cost of generating new customers is three times the cost of retaining an existing customer Satisfactory complaint management can create satisfied customers The key figure mediating between a company and a customer with a complaint is of course the employee of the service organization The role and performance of the employee will determine the success of a complaint handling process and the adequate service recovery In order to be able to fulfil this goal employees need to undergo training Furthermore the management needs to develop a corporate Facework Kathy Domenici, Stephen W. Littlejohn, 2006-04-27 By granting the other specificity authors Domenici and Littlejohn successfully uphold the important values of human dignity honor and respect as anchoring points in which the story of the book evolves Stella Ting Toomey California State University at Fullerton The book is written in user friendly language well planned well executed and packed with useful ideas on building positive facework in diverse contexts Stella Ting Toomey California State University at Fullerton The advantage of this text is its consistent strong and thoroughly researched focus on Communication The benefits for readers come from this focus as well as from the accessible language vivid examples and engaging suggestions Liliana Casta eda Rossmann California State University San Marcos Written in an accessible and engaging style there is much to recommend this text as an excellent illustration of practical theory William R Cupach Illinois State University Written in a clear engaging style Facework Bridging Theory and Practice introduces a new paradigm that identifies facework as the key to communication within the management of difference Authors Kathy Domenici and Stephen W Littlejohn illustrate how facework is a central process in the social construction of both identity and community Key Features Goes beyond traditional understandings of face to enrich the concept of facework This book formulates a new practical theory of facework and provides principles of practice derived from the theory Skills and methods appropriate for a face centered practice of communication in the management of difference are addressed Offers a wide spectrum of examples Building dignity honor and respect is an ongoing accomplishment within the conversations and episodes of group life in relationships organizations communities nations and international relations This book includes cases on the personal organizational societal and global levels Demonstrates a fresh perspective in a clear engaging and accessible style The book honors the research literature on facework and presents key findings in a meaningful way Intended Audience This is an excellent text for undergraduate and graduate courses in Intercultural Communication Interpersonal Communication Negotiation and Conflict Resolution Management Communication and Group Communication among others It is also a valuable resource for management consultants mediators facilitators trainers and organizational development professionals
