Rogers,Christine A. Stanley,2021-01-01 Conflict management is an overlooked area in leadership development Mediation as an intervention method to use in conflict management can be productive for building leadership capacity and organizational development in higher education Adults average five conflicts per day and people in titled leadership spend over two thirds of their time engaged in managing conflict This book offers conflict management strategies models and processes to support college and university personnel in recognizing and managing conflicts and how to build skill sets that can enhance effective communication and address issues strategically Building Consensus Monteze Snyder, Cheryl Gibbs, Susan A. Conflict and Consensus Between Key Stakeholders in the Realm of Affordable Housing Policy in Boulder, Colorado Mary Margaret McCroskey Blum, 2003 Consensus Building Judith Eleanor Innes, 2004 Consensus Building Roger Sidaway, David Rothe, Judith Annett, 1998-01-01 Conflict Resolution and the Interior Built Environment Anthony J. Purvis, 2012 ABSTRACT Consensus building is a mediation approach in the field of conflict resolution It involves a neutral third party facilitator leading stakeholders through a dialogue process to help them develop mutually agreed upon solutions to their problems United Nations 2011 Effective communication in a consensus building process is key to a successful outcome Susskind McKearnen Rappoport 1982 Gudykunst Rodriguez 2005 It stands to reason then that the design of the built environment in which consensus building is occurring may impact the success of the communication and ultimately the success of developing solutions to conflict When examining scholarly conflict resolution literature specifically written for professional mediators however there is little systematic discussion of the built environment and its potential impact on communication and consensus building outcomes Mediation expert Suzanne Ghais 2005 notes that her recommendations for addressing interior considerations come solely from personal experience and oral tradition among practitioners This author's study therefore seeks to identify interior environment qualities or features that enhance consensus building in Western societies That is the study's goal is to generate guidelines for dispute professionals that aid them in selecting and or modifying interior spaces for successful consensus building processes and events Additionally the study may be assistive to design professionals responsible for creating such supportive spaces Twelve environmental aspects emerged from the review of literature that likely influence communication and behavior within a space including symbolic meaning personal space space planning materials and finishes windows and views of nature lighting indoor air quality and odor ambient temperature sound and noise auxiliary spaces security safety and surveillance and environmental control The study used quantitative and qualitative data gathering and organization methods in a two phased process involving 476 members of the Association for Conflict Resolution the largest trade organization of dispute professionals in North America Association for Conflict Resolution 2012 Respondents assessed and verified the potential impact of each of the proposed twelve aspects on communication in a consensus building process identified key factors that related to each and proposed additional or alternative categories based on their personal professional experience Results showed that each of the twelve environmental aspects was valued by participants and that each of the aspects can exert at least some influence on consensus building processes No additional or alternative environmental categories were identified within the scope of interior design that may influence consensus building Particularly assistive is the emergence of eight themes that potentially may be used as a guideline for assessing the twelve interior environment aspects in a space used for consensus building They are a lack of distractions comfort confidentiality safety positive tone parity support of space planning logistics and flexibility The establishment of environmental guidelines for conflict resolution may ultimately assist in an increased likelihood of unhindered communication that is the foundation to successful consensus building Participation, Consensus Building and Conflict Management Training Course Jerome Delli Priscoli,2003*
