additionally invites the reader to celebrate the sublime and nuanced inner and outer experiences achieved through dancing. Foremost in these pages you will accompany two sisters who faced many challenges throughout their lives but were sustained and inspired by their love of dance. The Hanova School of Modern Studies in Body Sculpture and the Classical Dance occurred throughout the twentieth century on three continents around the world and may be largely forgotten but a record of the Hahn sisters' lives may be seen as one of many important personal narratives to be read in order to understand the history and formation of the modern dance we enjoy today.
