Olympic Victor Monuments and Greek Athletic Art Walter Woodburn Hyde, 1921 Olympic Victor Monuments and Greek Athletic Art Walter Woodburn Hyde, 2013-09 This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1921 edition. Excerpt: the sort was run at the Eleutheria at Plata where the contestants were completely enveloped in armor⁵ and were subject to peculiar rules. At Olympia the competitors originally ran with helmets, greaves, and round shields as we infer from scenes on archaic vases and from the statement of Pausanias that the statue of the first victor in this event, Damaretos of Heraia, was represented with these arms.⁶ In this passage Pausanias adds that the Eleians and other Greeks later gave up the greaves and we find that they disappear on the vase paintings.⁷ Hauser has shown that the vase paintings which however mostly illustrate the Athenian practice display a varied custom in respect of the use of the greaves before about 520 B.C., the general use of them until about 450 B.C., and after that date their disuse.⁸ The helmet disappeared after the greaves but the shield was never given up.¹ Thus the bronze statue of Mnesiboulos of Elateia, a victor over the runner of his native city, appears to have been represented with the shield.³ It was for this reason that the event was later sometimes called merely hoplite.³ The shields that appear on the vases are always round and the helmets are Attic.⁴ The gradual reduction in the amount of the armor may have been a concession to the regular athletes who probably looked upon the contest as a spurious sort of athletics. As for the style of the race, the hoplite runners seem to have run somewhat as the stade and double course runners, i.e. with their right hands up and their arms violently swinging.⁶ 1 See Lange, Das Motiv des aufgestuetzten Fusses 1879, pp. 9 f. Reisch, p. 46 n. 5. B.B. no. 67. Since only meagre remnants of these monuments have survived, the work is in the main concerned with the attempt to reconstruct their various types and poses. contributed to the making of sport as a way of life The popularity of sport is so pronounced in some cases that we speak of certain sports as national pastimes Baseball in the United States soccer in Britain and cricket in the Caribbean are among the relevant examples discussed Rather than regarding the historical development of sport as the outcome of passive spectator reception this work is interested in how sporting cultures have been made and developed over time through the active engagement of its enthusiasts This is to study the history of sport not only from below but also from within as a means to understanding the deep relationship between sport and people within class contexts the middle class as well as the working class Contestation over the making of sport along axes of race gender and class are discussed where relevant A range of cultural writers and theorists are examined in regard to both how their writing can help us understand the making of sport and as to how sport might be located within an overall cultural context in different places and times The book will appeal to students and academics within humanities disciplines such as cultural studies history and sociology and to those in sport studies programmes interested in the historical cultural and social aspects of sport This book was published as a special issue of Sport in Society Athletics in Ancient Athens Donald G. Mattusch,2019-05-15 Freestanding bronze statuary was the primary mode of artistic expression in classical Greece yet it was not until the nineteenth century that any original large statues of that period were unearthed Although ancient literature has preserved information about the most famous Greek sculptors who worked in bronze our perception of the art has been limited by the small number of extant originals from the sixth and fifth centuries B C there remain fewer than ten large cast bronze statues a like number of bronze heads an assortment of fragments and some clay molds for casting Carol Mattusch enriches our knowledge of this beloved but elusive art form in a comprehensive study of the style and techniques of bronze statuary during the Archaic 6th century B C and Classical 5th century B C periods Proceedings of the Board of Trustees of Cornell University Cornell University. Board of Trustees,1922 Archaic Greek Equestrian Sculpture Mary Ann Eaverly,1995 This welcome volume examines the use and meaning of equestrian statues in Archaic Greece relying not only on a full catalog of the sculptures but also on the rich comparative material in the literary and archaeological remains Previous works have either crowded this important material into a large study of all equestrian statues everywhere or else have examined only those few that belong to the Athenian Acropolis It has therefore been difficult to characterize the style and distribution of this sculpture let alone examine them within their cultural milieu Mary Ann Eaverly carries out precisely these important tasks The first half of the volume identifies the unique characteristics of equestrian statues as a type apart from other Archaic sculpture The author places the sculptures within their historical and cultural context and considers critical factors such as cultic activity aristocratic symbolism and the influence of Peisistratos The second half of the volume is a catalog that discusses all the extant pieces individually Archaic Greek Equestrian Sculpture will be of interest to students and scholars of Greek sculpture the Greek artistic heritage and the complex history of Archaic Greece The Cambridge Ancient History: plates.
