Congress. House. Committee on Appropriations. Subcommittee on the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies, 2000 The World's Search for Sustainable Development Mukul Sanwal, 2015-11-05 This text traces the evolution of sustainable development and climate change from the time it emerged in international consultations and agreements The three sections of the book focusing on the framework climate change and sustainable development seek to cover the essentials of the politics of natural resource usage at the global level The book explores the evolution of sustainable development and climate change within the framework of the United Nations and the way the concept has been defined through intergovernmental meetings agreements and consensus within the multilateral system It also explores the best ways of reducing the risk to the planet while enabling societies to pursue sustainable development paths The challenges call for a transformation of social systems to facilitate a broadly acceptable change The book also explores the adoption of low carbon models different from the high carbon socio technical systems and related social practices Defending the National Interest Stephen D. Krasner, 2020-10-06 Stephen Krasner's assumption of a distinction between state and society is the root of his argument for the superiority of a statist interpretation of American foreign policy Here he challenges the two dominant and rival interpretations of the relationship between state and society interest group liberalism and Marxism He contends that the state is an autonomous entity acting on behalf of the national interest and that state behavior cannot be explained by group or class interest On the basis of fifteen case studies drawn from extensive public records and published literature on American raw materials policy in the twentieth century Professor Krasner provides empirical substance to the debate about the meaning of the national interest the importance of bureaucratic politics and the influence of business on American foreign policy British

Foreign Policy and the National Interest T. Edmunds, J. Gaskarth, R. Porter, 2014-11-18 Whose interests does British foreign policy serve Is the national interest a useful explanatory tool for foreign policy analysts This interdisciplinary collection responds to these questions exploring ideas of Britain's national interest and their impact on strategy challenging current thinking and practice in the making of foreign policy United States National Interests in a Changing World Donald E. Nuechterlein, 2021-09-15 Although the term national interest has long been used in reference to the foreign policy goals of nations there has been no generally agreed upon definition of the concept as a result Donald E Nuechterlein contends there has been a tendency for foreign policy to be determined by institutional prejudice and past policy rather than by a systematic assessment of national interests By what criterion does a President decide that a given interest is or is not vital that is whether he must contemplate defending it by force if other measures fail In this study Nuechterlein offers a new conceptual framework for the analysis of foreign policy decisions resting on more precise definitions and distinguishing among the degrees of interest that the United States perceives in the range of foreign policy issues it faces He also deals with the constitutional problem of checks and balances between the Presidency and Congress in setting the goals of foreign policy and the influence of private interest groups and the media on the definition of national interest Underlining the need for constant reassessment of priorities in a rapidly changing international environment Nuechterlein illustrates his analysis by drawing on the American experience in foreign affairs since World War II A case study of the American involvement in Southeast Asia describes how six presidents beginning with Franklin Roosevelt viewed United States interests there and the conclusions each drew in terms of policy tools to defend those interests in Vietnam Finally he assesses what the future vital interests of the United States are likely to be in light of the shifting balance of world power and the growing importance of international economics West European Pacifism and the Strategy for Peace Peter Van Den Dungen, 1985-06-18

National Interests in International Society Martha Finnemore, 1996 How do states know what they want Asking how interests are defined and how changes in them are accommodated Martha Finnemore shows the fruitfulness of a constructivist approach to international politics She draws on insights from sociological institutionalism to develop a systemic approach to state interests and state behavior by investigating an international structure not of power but of meaning and social value An understanding of what states want she argues requires insight into the international social structure of which they are a part States are embedded in dense networks of transnational and international social relations that shape their perceptions and their preferences in consistent ways Finnemore focuses on international organizations as one important component of social structure and investigates the ways in which they redefine state preferences She details three examples in different issue areas In state structure she discusses UNESCO and the changing international organization of science In security she analyzes the role of the Red Cross and the acceptance of the Geneva Convention rules of war Finally she focuses on the World Bank and explores the changing definitions of development in the Third World Each case shows how international organizations socialize states to accept new political goals and new social values in ways that have lasting impact on the conduct of war the workings of the international political economy and the structure of states themselves

Foreign Policy In A Transformed World Mark Webber, Michael Smith, 2014-01-14 For 2nd and 3rd year courses in international politics and foreign policy This text examines foreign policy in relation to change and transformation It discusses traditional assumptions about foreign policy and foreign policy making and develops a framework to facilitate analysis of the challenges faced by foreign policy makers in the late 1990s The central elements of the framework are the foreign policy arena decision making and implementation The book then applies the framework to a set of regional case studies to explore the global and regional arenas and the challenges to which they give rise Finally specific case studies of two countries per region highlight the range of impacts for the changing global and regional context to focus on the analysis of decision making and implementation and to illustrate the benefits of comparative analysis
