

town crafts and in the process destroyed the Home Law (Heimatrecht). Only at that point were the communities helpless: they had lost the political balance of the old Empire; their guilds were destroyed; and their community citizenship had given way to territorial, or even German, citizenship. Hometown consciousness was left to find its own way; and Walker closes with an intriguing argument on the transformation of this social consciousness into national politics and thought.

Whatever his specific problems in the early modern period, Walker's idea of an urban model is clearly the only way for the German scholar to rise above the labyrinthine complexities that haunt the Holy Roman Empire. The question is what is the soundest methodological way to create this model? Fundamentally, Walker has used demography as his primary criterion. But for the early modern period, population alone is not sufficiently discriminating. Institutional differences were still too important in determining political rights and economic opportunities. Nevertheless, if these qualifications are borne in mind, Walker's model still provides a useful kind of framework for what should hopefully be the next stage of German urban history: a recognition, through comparison, of urban diversity and an appreciation of this diversity within the broader concept of cultural cohesiveness.

National Integration vs. Nationalism

Nationalism and National Integration Anthony Harold Birch, 1989 Nationalism and National Integration

Anthony H. Birch, 2012-11-12 Nationalist theories are still controversial while the process and frequent failures of national integration are issues of central importance in the contemporary world Birch's argument is illustrated by detailed and topical case studies of national integration in the United Kingdom Canada and Australia the United Kingdom with the Welsh the Scots the Irish and the coloured minorities Canada with its Anglo French tensions its cultural pluralism and its indigenous peoples claiming the right of self government Australia with its increasing ethnic diversity and its failure to integrate the Aborigines Nationalism, Democracy and National Integration in China Leong H. Liew, Shaoguang Wang, 2012-11-12 This book examines the changing role of nationalism in China in the light of the immense political and economic changes there during the 1990s It analyses recent debates between the nationalists New Left and liberals in China and examines the roles played by state sponsored and populist nationalism in China's foreign relations with the West in general and the USA in particular The issues of Taiwanese nationalism and Tibet and Xinjiang separatism are discussed with a focus on the questions of the impact of globalisation on national integration or fragmentation and the relationship between democracy and national integration should democracy precede national integration or could democracy be realised only after national integration or are democracy and national integration mutually exclusive objectives The book also examines the roles played by the People's Liberation Army and fiscal system in China in promoting Chinese nationalism and national integration
