Biological Approaches for Controlling Weeds Ramalingam Radhakrishnan,2018-09-05 Weed populations in agriculture are a major cause of yield loss Conventionally crop rotation and tillage practices limit the number of weed flora Several chemical herbicides are being applied to control weed growth but the long term use of those chemicals does not effectively control weeds due to the development of resistant germplasms which cause hazardous effects in living organisms The global interest in organic farming endorses the alternative way of weed control against chemical herbicides Recently biological agents have been added to integrated weed management strategies Several studies reveal that plant extracts bacteria fungi and their products effectively control weed seed germination and growth The aim of this book is to discuss the current understanding of bioherbicides and strategies to weed control Biological Control of Weeds in Australia M. H. Julien,R. E. McFadyen,Jim Cullen,2012 Biological control of weeds has been practiced for over 100 years and Australia has been a leader in this weed management technique The classical example of control of prickly pears in Australia by the cactus moth Cactoblastis cactorum which was imported from the Americas helped to set the future for biocontrol of weeds in many countries Since then there have been many projects using Classical Biological Control to manage numerous weed species many of which have been successful Importantly there have been no serious negative non target impacts the technique when practiced as it is in Australia is safe and environmentally friendly Economic assessments have shown that biocontrol of weeds in Australia has provided exceedingly high benefit to cost ratios This book reviews biological control of weeds in Australia to 2011 covering over 90 weed species and a multitude of biological control agents and potential agents Each chapter has been written by practicing biological control of weeds researchers and provides details of the weed the history of its biological control exploration for agents potential agents studied and agents released and the outcomes of those releases Many weeds were successfully controlled some were not many projects are still underway some have just begun however all are reported in detail in this book Biological Control of Weeds in Australia will provide invaluable information for biological control researchers in Australia and elsewhere Agents used in Australia could be of immense value to other countries that suffer from the same weeds as Australia The studies reported here provide direction to future research and provide examples and knowledge for researchers and students KEY FEATURES A unique collation of information for Australian weed research and management Contains all the information about biological control of weeds in Australia in one book Provides key references for further information Will become a well cited publication
