Natural Gain in the Grazing Lands of Southern Australia David Floyd Smith, 2000 The central theme of this text is that the introduction of agricultural and pastoral systems in Australia's temperate grazing lands has often created dynamic and sustaining ecosystems The author argues that while these ecosystems are not native and while they are not problem free they have made an immense contribution to the building of the country largely in terms of increased soil fertility This has been done by adding trace elements superphosphate and legumes thereby developing a new ecosystem probably just as self sustaining as the one it replaced

Bandwidth Reduction of Stimulated Brillouin Scattering and Applications in Optical Communication Stefan Preußler, 2016-10-12 Stimulated Brillouin scattering is the most dominant nonlinear effect in single mode optical fibers Its unique spectral characteristics especially the narrow bandwidth of 20-30 MHz enable numerous applications including optical spectrum analysis delay and storage of light distributed sensing and optical signal processing Most of them would benefit from a reduction of the Brillouin gain bandwidth This dissertation demonstrates several methods for significant reduction of the Brillouin gain bandwidth including a multi stage system the superposition of the gain with two losses as well as the utilization of a frequency domain aperture Thereby the Brillouin gain bandwidth can be reduced significantly down to 3 MHz which equals 15% of the normal bandwidth Furthermore the reduced Brillouin gain bandwidth is employed for various applications First the resolution and the dynamic range of a Brillouin based optical spectrum analyzer are enhanced significantly Second a new technique for the storage of optical data packets called Quasi Light Storage is introduced and the maximum storage time is increased to 160 ns for 8 bit data packets Finally Brillouin scattering is used for the processing of optical frequency combs leading to the generation high quality of mm and THz waves as well as almost ideal sinc shaped Nyquist pulse sequences
