But more than a mere guide, the book is an encouragement of citizens to be more active, to understand, to participate, to contribute, and to take part in the future. The United States Government, through the White House of the World Program Commission, hopes that this book will be a stepping stone toward that future.

Many people have worked hard, made publicly known in newspapers, on the radio, and on the news have been thanked and welcomed for sharing views. For a glimpse of the enormous amount of work involved, government organizations like the Commission have built a website to let us know how the book came to be a book of the day and people.
