New Interventionism 1991 1994 United Nations Experience In Cambodia Former Yugoslavia And Somalia:

The New Interventionism, 1991-1994 James Mayall, 1996-05-02 At the end of the Cold War the hope was that it would be possible to reform international society and create a new world order Its central feature would be international intervention not merely to deter or repel aggression across frontiers but to protect the victims of civil conflicts within states These hopes remain largely unfulfilled This book contributes to our understanding of this failure by examining the three major post Cold War operations in which the UN has been involved Each presented the international community with a different challenge in Cambodia it was to implement a previously negotiated political agreement in former Yugoslavia to devise a credible division of labour and authority between the UN and the European Union and in Somalia to mount a humanitarian mission in a country without a government Each chapter is accompanied by a chronology of events and a selection of relevant UN documents

Peacebuilding in the United Nations Fernando Cavalcante, 2019-05-06 This book traces the trajectory and different meanings of the concept of peacebuilding in the United Nations since the early 1990s It analyses how that concept gained life in a particular context and the implications of this process for the Organisation s support to societies affected by armed conflict in general and for peace operations in particular Departing from tenets about the influence of ideas in world politics and engaging with the critique of the liberal peace scholarship the book provides a theoretically informed narrative of how peacebuilding acquired different meanings while remaining largely motivated justified legitimated and informed by a proactive and top down agenda of promoting liberal democratic institutions norms and values as a remedy to the challenges faced by societies affected by armed conflict The book will appeal to scholars policymakers and practitioners in peacebuilding and post conflict development
