New Irish Writing From The Irish Press Series:

Irish Writing in the Twentieth Century David Pierce, 2000 Arranged chronologically by decade from the 1890s to the 1990s each decade is divided into two different types of writing critical documentary and imaginative writing and is accompanied by a headnote which situates it thematically and chronologically The Reader is also structured for thematic study by listing all the pieces included under a series of topic headings The wide range of material encompasses writings of well known figures in the Irish canon and neglected writers alike This will appeal to the general reader but also makes Irish Writing in the Twentieth Century ideal as a core text providing a unique focus for detailed study in a single volume

Nineteenth-Century British Writing Thomas Tracy, 2017-11-30 In The Wild Irish Girl the powerful Irish heroine's marriage to a heroic Englishman symbolizes the Anglo Irish novelist Lady Morgan's reimagining of the relationship between Ireland and Britain and between men and women Using this most influential of pro union novels as his point of departure the author argues that nineteenth century debates over what constitutes British national identity often revolved around representations of Irishness especially Irish womanhood He maps out the genealogy of this development from Edgeworth's Castle Rackrent through Trollope's Irish novels focusing on the pivotal period from 1806 through the 1870s The author's model enables him to elaborate the ways in which gender ideals are specifically contested in fiction the discourses of political debate and social reform and the popular press for the purpose of defining not only the place of the Irish in the union with Great Britain but the nature of Britishness itself The Field Day Anthology of Irish Writing Seamus Deane, Andrew Carpenter, Angela
