Seducing America Roderick P. Hart,1999 These feelings have become television s distinctive currency postmodern tokens for a manifestly uncertain world Hart explores the considerable costs of this legacy for governance and urges that it be supplanted by a New Puritanism a set of community based attitudes badly needed in the nation at present Mr. Sorkin Goes to Washington Melissa Crawley,2014-06-26 Before the unprecedented televised presidential debates of 1960 most Americans were able to relate to their leaders in little more than an historical context In the era of televised elections

however the media have allowed Americans to witness the paternal moral and intellectual qualities of their president up close Television has been so critical to this process of political socialization that for many Americans the televised image of the president is the president As the acclaimed television drama. The West Wing demonstrates fictional representations of the presidency can also be significant civic forces This book examines how film and television drama contribute to shaping the presidency and the way most Americans understand it and particularly the processes of political education The text discusses The West Wing's didactic potential its representation of White House politics and its depiction of race and gender with commentary on how fictional representations of the presidency become important elements of American political NEW directions in political communications ,1999 Political Campaigning in Referendums Holli A. consciousness Semetko, Claes H. de Vreese, 2004-08-02 This book reviews the research on campaigns and elections and investigates the effects of campaigning in referendums drawing on panel survey data media content data focus groups and interviews with journalists and campaign managers. The authors argue that the media coverage not only influences public perceptions of the campaign the referendum issue and the party leaders but that in a close race it also shapes the voting and the political future of the incumbent party. The first study to investigate the dynamics and effects of a referendum campaign on politicians media and citizens this innovative volume will be of interest to students and researchers of political communication Words Thomas Moriarty, 2003-10-30 The author accounts for South Africa's transition from apartheid to democracy from a rhetorical perspective Based on an exhaustive analysis of hundreds of public statements made by South Africa's leaders from 1985 to the present Moriarty shows how key constructions of the political scene paved the way for negotiations elections and national reconciliation These rhetorical changes moved South Africa out of the realm of violent conflict and into one of rhetorical conflict a democratic space in which the country could resolve its problems at the negotiating table and in the ballot box Political Discourse in the Media Anita Fetzer, Gerda Eva Lauerbach, 2007-06-27 This book departs from the premise that political discourse is intrinsically connected with media discourse as shaped by its cultural and transcultural characteristics It presents a collection of papers which examine political discourse in the media from a cross culturally comparative perspective in Arab Dutch British Finnish Flemish French German Israeli Swedish US American and international contexts By using different theoretical frameworks such as conversation analysis discourse analysis pragmatics and systemic functional linguistics the papers reflect current moves in political discourse analysis to cross disciplinary and methodological boundaries by integrating semiotics particularly multimodality cognition context genre and recipient design

Television and Politics in Evolving European Democracies Lynda Lee Kaid,1999 Throughout the world television has become an important part of the way in which political candidates and parties present their messages to voters during election campaigns This is particularly true in campaigns at the national level where voters have little personal contact with candidates and must rely on experiencing candidates through the media Despite the importance of the media for voter government interaction however many new reform governments in the post communist era in Eastern European countries failed to appreciate the demands of creating workable new media systems
