

AFRICAN TRADE UNIONISM IN SOUTH AFRICA

LEON LEVY

*President of the South African Congress of Trade Unions Elected in 1926 on a charge of High Treason—he is still standing trial—

A union of African trade unionism in the Union of South Africa is as difficult as it is urgent. There is no easy way of establishing the true position of African workers—their state of industrial organisation, their enthusiasm for trade unionism or their struggle for win recognition; for not much trade union literature is available, certainly nothing substantial on African unions. The press, with few exceptions, is not sympathetic to the cause of organised African labour, and reports trade union activity only with reluctance and when heavily pressed to do so by events themselves.

African trade unions, however, do exist, and they are growing rapidly. They have survived constant assault from the Nationalist Government, which, during the twelve years it has been in office, has made vigorous efforts to destroy them.

In this article I shall deal with the South African Congress of Trade Unions, the growth of which may help the reader to understand the true position of the labour movement in South Africa. The Congress, popularly known as S.A.C.T.U., is the only non-racial trade union co-ordinating body in South Africa. It has a membership of fifty-one affiliated unions and represents 22,000 workers—20,000 of these are African, while 2,000 are Coloured, Indian and European. Most of the African unions in South Africa belong to it.

The Congress came into existence in 1922, in order to provide a home for those unions which desired to promote multi-racial trade unionism. It was an important event, produced by an explosion of differences which had long existed in the labour movement.

After the 1917 revolt, when white workers fought their employers and the State itself in order to maintain the supremacy of white workers on the gold mines, General Smuts, Prime Minister at the time, realised that what he called a 'labour aristocracy', composed mainly of white workers, could always be relied upon to support a government based on white supremacy.

African Studies In this volume they along with other major specialists in the field explore the new configurations of African politics With tentative efforts at a revival of democracy now taking place it seems appropriate to reassess the theoretical debates and empirical themes that have characterized postwar Sub Saharan African politics Focusing on new realism that has emerged among Africanists since the dismantling of colonial rule the essays are presented as a corrective both to the initial euphoria informing African studies and to the later tendency to place blame for all Africa's political and economic difficulties on the receding specter of colonial oppression Neoliberal Bandwagonism. Civil society and the politics of belonging in Anglophone Cameroon Piet Konings, 2009 While neoliberals typically view civil society organizations as vital channels for the implementation of economic and political reforms they are also inclined to blame the politics of belonging for the poor record of these reforms Piet Konings rejects such notions and argues that the relationship between civil society and the politics of belonging is more complex in Africa than Western donors and scholars are inclined to admit He argues that ethno regional associations and movements are more significant constituents of civil society in Africa than the conventional organizations that are often uncritically imposed or endorsed He shows how the politics of belonging so pervasive in Cameroon and indeed much of Africa during the current neoliberal economic and political reforms has tended to penetrate the entire range of associational life and he calls for a critical reappraisal of prevalent notions and assumptions about civil society in the interest of African reality

Organise or Die? Raphaël Botiveau, 2017-12-01 The story of one of the leading trade unions in South Africa the National Union of Mineworkers and its role in the struggle against white minority rule Organise or Die Democracy and Leadership in South Africa's National Union of Mineworkers NUM is the first in depth study of one of the leading trade unions in the country Founded in 1982 the trade union played a key role in the struggle against white minority rule before turning into a central protagonist of the ruling Tripartite Alliance after apartheid Deftly navigating through workerist social movement and political terrains that shape the South African labour landscape this book sheds light on the path that led to the unprecedented 2012 Marikana massacre the dissolution of the Congress of South African Trade Unions Cosatu federation and to fractures within the African National Congress ANC itself Working with the notions of organisational agency and strategic bureaucratisation Raphaël Botiveau shows how the founding leadership of NUM built their union's structures with a view to mirror those of the multinational mining companies NUM faced Good leadership proved key to the union's success in recruiting and uniting mineworkers and NUM became an impressive school for union and political cadres producing a number of South Africa's top post apartheid leaders An incisive analysis of leadership styles and strategies shows how the fragile balance between an increasingly distant leadership and an increasingly militant membership gradually broke down Botiveau provides a compelling narrative of NUM's powerful history and the legacy of its leadership It will appeal to a broad readership including journalists students and social sciences scholars interested in South Africa's contemporary politics and labour history
