

A photograph of a protest or rally. In the foreground, a person's hands are visible holding a white rectangular sign. The sign has the text "CHANGE THE POLITICS NOT THE CLIMATE" in black, bold, sans-serif capital letters. The word "CHANGE" is at the top, followed by "THE" in a smaller font, then "POLITICS", then "NOT THE", and finally "CLIMATE" at the bottom. There are some small, colorful stickers on the sign: a red one near the top right of "CHANGE" and some green ones near "THE". The background is a blurred crowd of people, suggesting a large gathering. To the left, another sign is partially visible with the words "TER" and "OL" in blue letters. The overall scene is outdoors with natural lighting.

The Politics of Climate Change under President Obama

Hugh Atkinson, 2017-10-31 The last two decades have witnessed an ever growing partisan divide in US politics over climate change and global warming Significant elements in the Republican Party became openly hostile to the scientific evidence and following the election of George W Bush legislative action at the federal level effectively ground to a halt This opened up space at the state and local level to develop climate change policies with cities such as Chicago San Francisco and New York implementing a number of initiatives that brought real and substantive developments The election of Barack Obama in 2008 seemed to open new possibilities for federal and global leadership once more and whilst the Obama administration has been criticised for a somewhat contradictory approach to the issue at times there were nonetheless a number of substantive policy developments Through a substantive and detailed analysis of the politics of climate change this book places the evolution of US climate policy within broader debates on the nature of politics in the US and argues that there exists a latent potential often obscured by the complexities of its political system for America to act as a world leader on the issue This work will appeal particularly to students and scholars in American Politics but will also prove useful to those in the fields of general Politics climate change sustainability and environmental studies

Climate Change Anthony Giddens,2009-05-05 Climate change differs from any other problem that as collective humanity we face today If it goes unchecked the consequences are likely to be catastrophic for human life on earth Yet for most people and for many policy makers too it tends to be a back of the mind issue This book argues controversially we do not have a systematic politics of climate change Politics as usual won't allow us to deal with the problems we face while the recipes of the main challenger to orthodox politics the green movement are flawed at source cover Climate Change and Political Strategy Hugh Compston,2013-09-13 Although the science of climate change is well established and there are well known policy instruments that could significantly reduce greenhouse gas GHG emissions without prohibitive economic costs political obstacles to more determined action remain despite heightened concern among mainstream politicians and the public This book analyses the political dynamics of climate policy in affluent democracies from a number of different theoretical angles in order to improve our understanding of which political strategies would be likely to enable national governments to make deep cuts in GHG emissions while avoiding significant political damage The authors argue that different conceptual and logical theories highlight different features of political situations Describing the politics of climate policy in this way will result in different conceptual logical views of this phenomenon And to some extent the inferences drawn from such differing views about the nature of political obstacles to more vigorous action on climate change and the best ways of overcoming them will also be different Singly and together these analyses reveal a more detailed nuanced view of the political options open to activist governments This book was previously published as a special issue of Environmental Politics The Science and Politics of Global Climate Change Andrew E. The Politics of Global Climate Change Patrick M. Regan, 2015-11-17 In 2009 the US House of Representatives passed legislation requiring reductions in greenhouse gas emissions by 18 percent over the coming decade Later that year President Obama went to Copenhagen to sign a treaty requiring reductions by 50 percent over a two decade period The President came back with nothing no firm commitment to reduce emissions and only a vague target to hold global temperature rises to under 2 C How does a President who has a 75 vote majority in the House and a 19 vote majority in the Senate who has pre approval for a treaty reducing greenhouse gas production by 18 percent not achieve a treaty with at least the minimum goal of 18 percent reductions by 2020 Others have answered the puzzle by looking at institutional designs or negotiation dynamics This book articulates a multilevel process that starts with local politics to explain how they can influence international negotiations and why President Obama s efforts in Copenhagen were doomed to fail Understanding the role of local private interests can help form strategies for overcoming national resistance to climate change legislation and ultimately international agreements that could change the environmentally self destructive course we are on
