Developing Nations and the Politics of Global Integration Stephan Haggard, 1995-04-01 Developing countries are becoming important players in the world economy Although they were slow to liberalize trade they are now joining the more economically advanced nations in implementing trade reforms and in taking steps to deepen global integration The lowering of trade barriers and the growth of foreign investment have benefited the developing countries but have also created vulnerabilities including risks of dependence and political interference Is deeper integration in the best interest of developing countries In this book part of the Integrating National Economies series Stephen Haggard examines the position of the developing countries in the international trade regime Focusing on the nations of East and Southeast Asia and Latin American Haggard explores the cause of economic liberalization policies in the developing nations He argues that various international constraints such as economic shocks and political pressures from the economically advanced nations pushed developing countries to open up to international competition and to pursue economic relations with advanced industrial states Haggard addresses such central questions as Will developing countries benefit from the deep integration agenda Will they instead join closed regional blocs that fragment the international economy Will the developing nations orient themselves toward the multilateral institutions particularly the World Trade Organization or will they gravitate toward regional arrangements Haggard argues that the advanced developing countries have become strong supporters of the multilateral system and that the extent of regionalism

has been overstated. He contends that a more serious threat is the lure of bilateralism and the effort of the advanced industrial states to impose standards on developing countries that are inappropriate or politically counterproductive. A volume of Brookings Integrating National Economies Series Politics in the Developing World 4e Peter Burnell, Vicky Randall, Lise Rakner, 2014-02. The fourth thoroughly updated edition of this well respected textbook explores the changing nature of politics in the developing world. Leading experts in the field consider theoretical approaches, society-state relations and policies with a series of illustrative country-based case studies. Ecological Policy and Politics in Developing Countries Uday Desai, 1998-04-16. The interconnectedness of the global environment and finiteness of the earth's natural resources require an increased understanding of environmental and natural resource policy and politics in countries around the world. This is especially true of industrializing countries where widespread ecological disturbances and rapid exploitation of natural resources are taking place. Ecological Policy and Politics in Developing Countries provides an in-depth study of ecological problems, policies and politics in ten major industrializing countries. Each chapter discusses the increasingly international context of domestic environmental policies and explores some of the powerful interests and institutional forces that contribute to ecological problems and shape the policies to deal with them in each country. The authors identify some of the major impediments to both well-designed environmental policies and their effective implementation. The ten countries included here—the Czech Republic, China, India, Indonesia, Mexico, Nigeria, Taiwan, Thailand, Slovakia, and Venezuela—cover five continents, over half of the world's population, and most of the major industrializing countries. Contributors include Lester Ross, Robert Cribb, Jonathan Rigg, and Philip Stott. Juju Chin, Shou Wang, R. K. Sapru, Stephen P. Mumme, Pablo Gutman, Olusegun Areola, and Catherine Albrecht. Women and other Marginalized Section in the Politics of Developing Countries Dr. Ram Ayodhya, 2022-01-22. Third world women, just as women in industrialized nations, are largely represented in particular occupations. The majority work in agricultural employment or jobs that are unregulated by the state, such as street vendors and small businesses. Similarly, as in industrialized nations, Third World professional women are over-represented in such professions as nursing and teaching. Divisions between women's and men's work have obvious economic and political implications. Evidence of gender inequality and exploitation of women exists in most societies, yet some of the worst cases are found in the developing world. The murder of some five thousand women annually in India by dissatisfied husbands, the enslavement of women working in Pakistan's brick-making industry, wife beatings in Zambia and the Andes, and the sale of child brides are only a few of the many instances of women's subservient status in many Third World countries. Less dramatic examples of gender inequality include divorce laws that favour husbands, the restricted opportunities for women's employment in universities, the professions, and higher paid blue collar jobs, and the double day that women must frequently face: coming home from a long day's work and having to do all the housework and child care. After years of neglect, many international agencies and government planners have begun to recognize women's special status and needs in development. projects The book brings together information on women s and weaker sections of education and development reviews research results for each developing region identifies gaps in current knowledge and discusses problems of methodology

Politics of Educational Innovations in Developing Countries Nelly P. Stromquist,Michael L. Basile,2003-08-29 In the educational arena new ideas often compete as solutions to recurrent problems making the concept of innovations a widespread discursive term While expectations are substantial for each innovation implementation of ideas has shown them to be more modest in practice This book examines innovations in several developing countries presenting case studies of technological curricular and organizational innovations selected for their magnitude in financial investment scope and duration The case studies explore the social and political contexts that shaped the features of these innovations and what they accomplished over time in terms of teacher cost reduction status mobility access to education and national unity The experience of countries such as Brazil Lesotho the Philippines and Namibia and the influence of international agencies such as the World Bank are described and analyzed against theories of social and organizational change The case studies themselves also serve as subjects for reflection on the prevailing positivist approaches to research and knowledge The Politics of Educational Innovations should be of considerable interest to students of educational change wither in the academic world or in the fields of government and international cooperation
