What Can We Learn From Those Who Have Passed On?

Prehistoric Mortuary Variability on Gabriola Island, British Columbia

by A. JOANNE CURTIN

Archaeology Press, Simon Fraser University, 2002. viii + 157 pp., illus., app., refs., index. Price: ISBN 0-86491-227-7, (Sc) $25.00

Joanne Curtin's publication is a slightly revised version of her PhD dissertation at Ohio State University. One consequence is that the book is organized in the style of a dissertation as opposed to a more narrative format.

The book deals with the analysis of a set of burials from five burial features at two sites on Gabriola Island in the Gulf of Georgia region of British Columbia, and their comparison with burials from the nearby False Narrows midden. The organization follows that of a typical dissertation. In the first paragraph of chapter one, Curtin outlines the problem that she was researching and presents the three hypotheses that she wished to examine, specifically, that the two burial populations recovered on Gabriola Island represent either:

1. "diachronic variation in mortuary practices";
2. "different biological populations with different burial customs"; and
3. "different social groups within the same biological population."

Unfortunately, Curtin does not tell us until sometime later which population she is referring to. Next Curtin introduces the topic of mortuary analysis, beginning with a brief summary of the development of the subject, followed by observations on its application on the Northwest Coast and on Gabriola Island. Thus, this chapter provides a good introduction to the following description and discussion. It clearly outlines what is to follow and makes it much easier for readers to locate themselves in relation to the data Curtin presents.

In the second chapter, "The Study Area," Curtin describes the geography, geology, and biology of the Gulf Islands, covering the time from the late Pleistocene to the present. It also provides an ethnographic overview of the study area. A regional culture history for the Gulf of Georgia follows, relying on generally accepted chronologies and classifications. Last is a summary of the prehistory of the Nanaimo area, including Gabriola Island. By the end of the first two relatively short chapters, a total of 16 pages, the problem, its theoretical background, and the context and prehistory of the study area have been summarized. While somewhat condensed, this provides the reader with the necessary background information to situate the analysis that follows.

In chapter three, Curtin describes the methods used to address her hypotheses. She outlines the reconnaissance methods for the Gabriola Island sites, including definitions of the recorded data types. A description of the excavation and data collection methods for human remains follows, with appropriate definitions provided. The author describes how she reconstructed and conjoined the various bone fragments and elements found, and how she collected data from the reconstructed parts. A section on comparisons of the Gabriola Island burials that she recovered with those from the False Narrows midden is included, with descriptions of the False Narrows materials, and of the method for determining biological distance, or similarity, between the two sample sets.

In chapter four, Curtin discusses the site reconnaissance of a three kilometer long section of the False Narrows bluff on Gabriola Island. Three site areas are described, one of which (DgRw 204) is the subject of this study and two of which (DgRw 210 and 213) are not. A second study area (DgRw 199) is mentioned in the previous chapter but is not described in detail as are the three sites presented in this chapter. It would seem useful to have similar descriptions of both study sites in the same chapter.

Chapters five through nine are reports on five burial features from two sites (DgRw 204 and 199). Each provides a description of the feature, the results of the excavations, a description of the matrix of the feature, a listing of faunal remains, a list of artifacts recovered, dates for the features, and a discussion of the recovery and analysis of the human remains. Included in the discussion of buried remains are observations on the conditions of the remains, the spatial distribution of remains, skeletal reconstruction, evidence for burning, demographic information, skeletal anomalies and pathologies, and mortuary practices. The largest of the burial features is DgRw 199 - F1, which is given the longest description and discussion. Some of the remains from this feature and from DgRw 199 - F9 exhibit burning, and some exhibit a variety of pathologies such as degenerative joint disease, developmental defects, dental anomalies, fractures, cultural modification of one individual's skull, and infectious diseases; specifically there were three individuals, and possibly another, diagnosed as suffering from treponemal infections. The data in these chapters are presented in a
