Religion And Fertility Arab Christian Muslim Differentials:

Religion and Fertility Joseph Chamie, 1981-04-30 This work is a critical investigation into the relationship between religious affiliation on the one hand and fertility family size preferences and family planning behaviour on the other Dr Chamie works from a set of unique data the 1971 Fertility and Family Planning Survey in Lebanon This survey is not only a national study of Lebanese fertility but also a large scale survey 2 800 people offering the opportunity to study Arab Christian Muslim differentials Lebanon s demographic situation has far greater scientific and practical importance than might be supposed from its relatively small population From observing the important religious communities at different stages of social and economic development Dr Chamie has thus been able to analyse the interacting effects of religion and socio economic development on reproductive behaviour Birth, Death, and Religious Faith in an English Dissenting Community

Albion M. Urdank, 2015-12-17 This study lies at the intersection of three principal areas of social history demography religion and quantitative methods It is a microanalysis of an English population at the level of the Anglican parish during the era of the evangelical revival which includes unusually Protestant dissenters from the Established church in this case Particular Baptists who were moderate Calvinists It goes a step beyond previous studies by giving Anglicans and Dissenters co equal status in a comparative demographic analysis and by demonstrating how religious values informed procreative activity It does so through a combination of advanced statistical methodologies and an innovative treatment of data collection forms as readable texts The study concludes that the likelihood of another birth increased following a religious conversion experience especially among both Anglican and Baptist wives following marriage Mortality too had a less constraining effect on procreative activity which in conformity with the English experience was driven largely by fertility The Breakdown of
