Nasser And Sadat Decision Making And Foreign Policy 1970 197:

Nasser and Sadat Shaheen Ayubi, 1994-10-04 This book investigates the role and influence of Egyptian leadership upon foreign policy decisions by utilizing the decision making approach It examines two foreign policy decisions formulated by Presidents Nasser and Sadat in January 1970 and July 1972 respectively In essence this study endeavors to accomplish three objectives First it reconstructs the decision making activities that culminated in the two decisions so as to promote our comprehension about Egyptian foreign policy making activities that culminated in the two decisions Second by presenting a research framework it seeks to shed light on the decision making process in other developing countries Last it examines the causal role of the operational code beliefs as well as the psychohistorical approach to the analysis of leadership to explain decisional outcome Contents Acknowledgments Introduction Foreign Policy Making and Leadership Foreign Policy in the Developing World A Review of Past Studies A Research Framework for Foreign Policy Making in Egypt The Invitation and the Expulsion Nasser and Sadat Personal Portraits The Research Framework and the Soviet Expulsion Toward a Better Understanding of Foreign Policy in the Developing World Appendices Bibliography Index Reconceptualizing

Deterrence Elli Lieberman, 2012-09-10 This book offers a reconceptualisation of conventional deterrence theory and applies it to enduring rivalries in the Middle East The work argues that many of the problems encountered in the development of deterrence theory lay in the fact that it was developed during the Cold War when the immediate problem it had to address was how to prevent catastrophic nuclear wars The logic of nuclear deterrence compelled a preoccupation with the problem of stability over credibility however because the logic of conventional deterrence is different the solution of the tension between credibility and stability is achieved by deference to credibility due to the requirements of reputation and costly signaling This book aims to narrow the gap between theory and evidence It explores how a reconceptualization of the theory as a process that culminates in the internalization of deterrence within enduring rivalries is better suited to account for its final success a finding that has eluded deterrence theorists for long This interdisciplinary book will be of much interest to students of deterrence theory strategic studies international security Middle Eastern studies and IR in general The Middle East sophistication and detailed knowledge of a wide variety of sources to bear on a crucial period when the Cold War was being fought out in the Middle East He is quick to note that neither the United States nor the Soviet Union was particularly successful in exerting its influence in the region In addition the local powers quickly learned to exploit the superpower rivalry He also vividly conveys how the Israeli challenge exacerbated inter Arab relations Finally relying on Arabic sources he gives a glimpse into the internal decision making of Egypt and other Arab states noting that they often overestimated their importance to outside powers This well researched and objective study is a welcome addition to serious history written by Middle East scholars from the region from Foreign Affairs May June 1995 Nasser and Sadat Shaheen Ayubi,1997

Yetiv,2011-03-01 Steve A Yetiv has developed an interdisciplinary integrated approach to studying foreign policy decisions which he applies here to understand better how and why the United States went to war in the Persian Gulf in 1991 and 2003 Yetiv s innovative method employs the rational actor cognitive domestic politics groupthink and bureaucratic politics models to explain the foreign policy behavior of governments Drawing on the widest set of primary sources to date including a trove of recently declassified documents and on interviews with key actors he applies these models to illuminate the decision making process in the two Gulf Wars and to develop theoretical notions about foreign policy What Yetiv discovers in addition to empirical evidence about the Persian Gulf and Iraq wars is that no one approach provides the best explanation but when all five are used a fuller and more complete understanding emerges Thoroughly updated with a new preface and a chapter on the 2003 Iraq War Explaining Foreign Policy already widely used in courses will continue to be of interest to students and scholars of foreign policy international relations and related fields Sadat: Modern Master of the Indirect Approach

,2001 Egypt and the rest of the Arab world were caught in political limbo after the 1967 war with Israel Israel had established strategic frontier defenses on the bordering Arab lands seized in the conflict The psychological impact on broken and defeated armies and the civilian population was telling The Arabs desired a political solution to regain their captured land but the Israelis consolidated those areas following their victory and began to permanently settle on them Anwar Sadat the President of Egypt increasingly was frustrated by the failure of diplomatic efforts to dislodge the Israelis from the occupied territory From a position of weakness the Arabs were unable to negotiate an acceptable settlement with Israel or gain the attention of the superpowers to broker a peaceful equitable outcome to the ongoing conflict Although he warned of an impending Battle of Destiny every year from 1970 through 1973 Sadat's lack of follow up began to threaten his credibility It was this no peace no war state of affairs that precipitated the Arab decision to break the existing political deadlock through military means An insightful statesman and strategist Sadat realized that he lacked the power or resources to win an all out war with Israel However he did have a firm grasp of the elements of statecraft and a unique vision for employing them His plan to execute a joint limited war to achieve Egyptian and Arab national political objectives and his shaping of the international political environment in support of this effort was brilliant His success is a lasting testament to the effectiveness of the indirect approach Using the Diebel model for developing National Security Strategy and the Course II Framework for Military Strategy this paper will show how Sadat effectively conceptualized and employed available means to attain his foreign policy and domestic ends
