

Life in the RAINFOREST

The world's rainforests are perfectly-balanced ecosystems, home to half of all the world's species. They provide everything that the plants, animals and indigenous people living in them need to thrive. Many species rely on each other for survival, so if some plants are destroyed, or an animal becomes extinct, it can have a devastating effect on the rest of the forest. Take a trip deep into this African rainforest for a closer look.

Watering the WORLD

Rainforests cover all the giant water pumps. The big broad leaves on their stems draw up water - and the rain forest leaves release it back into the air as water vapour. This helps the air to rise to different heights in the forest. Thanks for the shower!

Busy BEES

Bees are one of the most important insects in the rainforest. As they buzz about collecting nectar, they pass pollen to the plants which allows plants to reproduce. From flower to flower, spreading seeds to grow. Bees are the rainforest's 'milkshake delivery' - it's a busy street for people living in the rainforest. Bzz!

TRUNKS in the trees

Elephants only stand about 10% of what they eat. So most plants and trees need to grow through the rainforest's floor. As the elephants walk to eat, their trunks take out and give. Amazingly, when trees actually need to grow through an elephant's gut to sprout!

Gardeners of the FOREST

Gorillas spend their time eating leaves, fruits, seeds and shoots. By dispersing seeds, gorillas play a key role in maintaining the African rainforests and, hence, the world's climate. When you plant a tree in Africa and look after it, you're helping to build a better world. When you plant a tree in the forest, you're helping another plant to grow. Thank you!

Hidden FRUITS

There are lots of amazing foods in the rainforest - if you know where to look! Using their hunting and eating, the indigenous forest people depend on the forest for food and survival. So, if the forest did disappear, their lives would be going with the animals that live in the forest. Thank you!

Tiny TROOPERS

Bees, spiders, lizards and beetles may be some of the smaller creatures in the rainforest, but they have many jobs to do - keeping the rainforest healthy. By eating the forest's dead plants and animals, they remove nutrients from the rainforest, leaving the ground and trees green, big and strong. Top work!

Forest FRIENDS

Rainforest birds, like the African grey parrot, feed their young in the forest. As they search for food, some birds fall to the ground and - in time - grow into new plants and trees that without the forest, these beautiful birds have no food or protection - and they're left fighting for survival.

Tropical TREASURES

For centuries, the rainforest provides everything - from shelter and medicine to food and clothing. They can't survive without it. It's like living in the forest. You have to build houses, find food, find shelter and even protect your family from the forest's dangers.
