The division of human society by race class and gender has been addressed by scholars in many of the social sciences Now historical archaeologists are demonstrating how material culture can be used to examine the processes that have erected boundaries between people Drawing on case studies from around the world the essays in this volume highlight diverse moments in the rise of capitalist civilization both in Western Europe and its colonies In the first section the contributors address the dynamics of the racial system that emerged from European colonialism They show how archaeological remains shed light on the institution of slavery in the American Southeast on the treatment of Native Americans by Mormon settlers and on the color line in colonial southern Africa The next group of articles considers how gender was negotiated in nineteenth century New York City in colonial Ecuador and on Jamaican coffee plantations A final section focuses on the issue of class division by examining the built environment of eighteenth century Catalonia and material remains and housing from early industrial Massachusetts These essays constitute an archaeology of capitalism and clearly demonstrate the importance of history in shaping cultural consciousness Arguing that material culture is itself an active agent in the negotiation of social difference they reveal the ways in which historical archaeologists can contribute to both the definition and dismantling of the lines that divide
