Montes,2006 This thesis argues the need for major change in higher education options currently available to Native American students in the United States Universities and Tribal Colleges represent the most common choices that Native students opt for in seeking degrees in tertiary education However for the most part Universities and Tribal Colleges are not working effectively enough to produce the levels of success that are significantly transforming of the wider social economic and cultural crisis conditions within many Native American communities This thesis will focus on how to develop a major transformation of the higher education sector generally a focus which also positively includes the underdeveloped potential that lies within the Tribal Colleges and Native programs in various university sites This thesis attempts to clarify what has gone wrong in the higher education of Native Americans and to propose a national innovative strategy for intervention Identifying what is problematic in existing approaches will build critical insights that will inform the new strategies for change The overall argument is that new institutions which are more sensitive and responsive to Indigenous aspirations first and foremost need to be considered as a key in transforming Native American higher education performance Rather than define absolutely all of the possible ingredients of what might be included in a new higher education model this thesis works first to identify and aggregate a number of key barriers and constraints by collating different information streams Once identified these critical elements practices values and structures that are deemed to be the major barriers to Native success are then used to inform the proposed new institutional framework While a single institution model is ultimately proposed by this thesis it should be regarded as an answer not the answer A broader intention of this thesis is to bring more focus to this area of concern and underdevelopment within Higher Education and suggest that there are different answers and possibilities as the Maori examples have demonstrated that are truly innovative and which can profoundly impact Native American individual and community social economic cultural and political development and advancement UBC Promises of the Past David H. identified these critical elements practices values and structures that are deemed to be the major barriers to Native success are then used to inform the proposed new institutional framework While a single institution model is ultimately proposed by this thesis it should be regarded as an answer not the answer A broader intention of this thesis is to bring more focus to this area of concern and underdeve

Gade, Maureen Kawaoka, 1994-01-01 Also included is a thought provoking section on the dominant connection between higher education and the economy that evaluates how well the test of service to the labor market has been met and counters the charge that our educational system is to blame for the nation s decline in economic productivity and lack of international competitiveness

Diversity in American Higher Education Lisa M. Stulberg, Sharon Lawner Weinberg, 2012-05-23 Diversity has been a focus of higher education policy law and scholarship for decades continually expanding to include not only race ethnicity and gender but also socioeconomic status sexual and political orientation and more However existing collections still tend to focus on a narrow definition of diversity in education or in relation to singular topics like access to higher education financial aid and affirmative action By contrast Diversity in American Higher Education captures in one volume the wide range of critical issues that comprise the current discourse on diversity on the college campus in its broadest sense This edited collection explores legal perspectives on diversity and affirmative action higher education s relationship to the deeper roots of K 12 equity and access policy politics and practice s effects on students faculty and staff Bringing together the leading experts on diversity in higher education scholarship Diversity in American Higher Education redefines the agenda for diversity as we know it today

Higher Education in the United States and Latin America Joseph P. Cangemi, Cash Kowalski, 1982 Tribal Colleges and Universities United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Indian Affairs (1993-), 2007 Beyond the Asterisk Heather J. Shotton, Shelly C. Lowe, Stephanie J. Waterman, 2023-07-03 A Choice Outstanding Academic Title for 2013 While the success of higher education and student affairs is predicated on understanding the students we serve the reality is where the Native American population is concerned that this knowledge is generally lacking This lack may be attributed to this population s invisibility within the academy it is often excluded from institutional data and reporting and frequently noted as not statistically significant and its relegation to what is referred to as the American Indian research asterisk The purpose of this book is to move beyond the asterisk in an effort to better understand Native students challenge the status quo and provide an informed base for leaders in student and academic affairs and administrators concerned with the success of students on their campuses The authors of this book share their understanding of Native epistemologies culture and social structures offering student affairs professionals and institutions a richer array of options resources and culturally relevant and inclusive models to better serve this population The book begins by providing insights into Native student experiences presenting the first year experience from a Native perspective illustrating the role of a Native living learning community in student retention and discussing the importance of incorporating culture into student programming for Native students as well as the role of Native fraternities and sororities The authors then consider administrative issues such as the importance of outreach to tribal nations the role of Tribal Colleges and Universities and opportunities for collaborations and the development of Native American Student Services Units The book concludes with recommendations for how institutions can better serve Native students in graduate programs the role that Indigenous faculty play in student success and how professional associations can assist student affairs professionals with fulfilling their role of supporting the success of Native American students staff and faculty This book moves beyond the asterisk to provide important insights from Native American higher education leaders and non Native practitioners who have made Native students a priority in their work While predominantly addressed to the student affairs profession providing an understanding of the needs of the Native students it serves describing the multi faceted and unique issues characteristics and experiences of this population and sharing proven approaches to developing appropriate services it also covers issues of broader administrative concern such as collaboration with tribal colleges as well academic issues such as graduate and professional education The book covers new material as well as expanding on topics previously addressed in the literature including Native American Greek organizations incorporating Native culture into student programming and the role of Native American Special Advisors The contributors are themselves products of colleges and universities where Native students are too often invisible and who succeeded despite the odds Their insights and the examples they provide add richness to this book It will provide a catalyst for new higher education practices that lead to direct and increased support for Native Americans and others who are working to remove the Native American asterisk from research and practice
