The Tropical Rain Forest Marius Jacobs, 2012-12-06 In recent years tropical forests have received more attention and have been the subject of greater environmental concern than any other kind of vegetation There is an increasing public awareness of the importance of these forests not only as a diminishing source of countless products used by mankind nor for their effects on soil stabilization and climate but as unrivalled sources of what today we call biodiversity Threats to the continued existence of the forests represent threats to tens of thousands of species of organisms both plants and animals It is all the more surprising therefore that there have been no major scientific accounts published in recent years since the classic handbook by Paul W Richards The Tropical Rain Forest in 1952 Some excellent popular accounts of tropical rain forests have been published including Paul Richards s The Life of the Jungle and Catherine Caulfield s In the Rainforest and Jungles edited by Edward Ayensu There have been numerous often conflicting assessments of the rate of conversion of tropical forests to other uses and explanations of the underlying causes and in 1978 UNESCO UNEPI FAO published a massive report The Tropical Rain Forest which although full of useful information is highly selective and does not fully survey the enormous diversity of the forests

Subramanyam,2003-06 Till recently dialogues and exchanges on strategic questions had unfortunately been an exclusive Western monopoly The perceptions of our scholars journalists and others tended to be influenced largely by the vast quantities of literature produced by Western strategic sources Academicians from the non aligned world very often met each other in conferences organized under Western auspices There are very few fields in which our academic dependence has been as great as in the field of strategic studies This Seminar represents a significant departure from this pattern It affords an opportunity for the two non aligned friendly neighbours to get together to discuss our respective strategic perceptions to establish direct contacts and communications between our institutions and scholars and to improve and reinforce our mutual understanding free from the distorting influence of foreign scholars Viewed in this perspective the significance of this seminar goes far beyond this immediate occasion Indonesia has developed the concept of national resilience In India we have a philosophy of self reliance Both these approaches require that on strategic and international security issues we should develop our own independent perceptions unfettered by the biased strategic doctrines of Western scholars This was in fact to some extent the position in the first decade of non alignment when both our countries rejected the concept of a rigid bipolar world though our perceptions at that stage were derived more from certain philosophical formulations rather than from a detailed analysis of strategic factors which affected our security Today it is obvious that such an approach is grossly inadequate It is necessary for us to independently compile relevant factual data analyse them critically and derive our own conclusions It is on the basis of these independent conclusions that our own national strategies have to be formulated Institutions like the Centre for Strategic and International Studies and the Institute for Defence Studies and Analyses play a very useful role in developing such national perceptions Interactions between such institutions are bound to reflect in due course at national levels      General Catalogue of Printed Books British Museum.
