Nicaraguan Refugees In Costa Rica Adjustment To Camp Life:

Nicaraguan Refugees in Costa Rica Gilda Pacheco, 1989 Causes and Aftermaths of the Economic, Political and Cultural Migration in the Area of the Caribbean and Central America During the XXth Century Alfredo Fernando Reid Ellis, 2007 Refugee and Labour Movements in Sub-Saharan Africa Jonathan Baker, Roger Zetter, 1995 This report is the second of a series on emergencies and disaster relief published by the Swedish International Development Authority and the Nordic Africa Institute It contains two papers that focus on some longer term impacts of refugee and migrant worker flows which have implications for the way humanitarian relief is conceptualised and planned The first is an overview of migrant worker and refugee flows in Sub Saharan Africa It suggests that the negative impact of exporting male workers from rural households has been overemphasised While there is psychological stress from family separations and the spread of Aids is associated with labour migration such movements can also be viewed as a capital accumulation strategy which financially benefits the sending households without necessarily leading to a drop in their agricultural production and as vital foreign exchange for the sending country through incoming remittances It also suggests that the presence of refugees is not necessarily an economic burden for the host country Refugees may as a labour source and as consumers contribute to development The second paper reviews the literature on shelter and settlement strategies for refugees It advocates a conceptual approach which is developmental rather than relief oriented an approach which integrates refugees and hosts needs and puts emphasis on tackling the long term consequences of mass forced migration Current practice is critically appraised to draw out the lessons of best practice and find alternatives to encampment style shelter The author does not believe that the integrated planning and durable housing which he advocates would dissuade refugees from repatriating

Jesus the Refugee D. Glenn Butner Jr., 2023-01-24 Images of modern refugees often invoke images of the infant Christ and the historical circumstances of the holy family s flight to Egypt in the face of persecution But rather than leaving this association at the merely symbolic level Jesus the Refugee explores Jesus s flight through modern legal conventions on refugee status in the United States and the European Union Would Jesus and his parents be protected from refoulement Would they receive rights to employment and civic engagement Would they be turned away Is the holy family a refugee family Jesus the Refugee argues that the holy family has a limited set of legal options for protection but under current law is unlikely to receive any This shocking claim stands or falls on legal details like the ability to demonstrate reasonable fear of persecution or whether fleeing Palestine but not the Roman Empire affords protection for internally displaced migrants Besides introducing the basics of modern refugee law and processes Jesus the Refugee aims to raise ethical challenges to our current refugee system by highlighting Jesus as one of the least of these indicting our moral failures and challenging us to make amends Coming Home? Lynellyn D. Long, Ellen Oxfeld, 2017-06-16 Few things weigh on the human spirit more heavily than a sense of place the lands we live in and return to have a profound ability to shape our notions of home and homeland not to mention our own identities The pull of the familiar and the desire to begin anew are conflicting impulses for the nearly 180 million people who live outside their countries of origin often with the expectation of returning home Of 30 million people who immigrated to the United States alone between 1900 and 1980 10 million are believed to have returned to their homelands While migration flows occur in both directions surprisingly few studies of transnationalism global migration or diaspora address return experiences Undertaking a comparative analysis of how coming home affects individuals and their communities in a myriad cultural and geographic settings the contributors to this volume seek to understand the unique return migration experiences of refugees migrants and various others as they confront the social pressures and a sense of displacement that accompany their journeys The returns depicted in Coming Home range from temporary visits to permanent repatriation from voluntary to coerced movements and from those occurring after a few years of exile to those after several decades away The geographic sites include the Balkans Barbados China Eritrea Ethiopia Germany Nicaragua the Philippines Rwanda and Vietnam Several studies portray the experiences of returning refugees who earlier fled war and violence while others focus on economic or labor migrants As the essays show connections between permanent returnees and home communities are contentious and complex On the one hand issues of land title property rights political orientation and religious and cultural beliefs and practices create grounds for clashes between returnees and their home communities but on the other returnees bring with them a unique ability to transform local practices and provide new resources

Seeking Refuge Maria Cristina Garcia, 2006-03-06 The political upheaval in Nicaragua El Salvador and Guatemala had a devastating human toll at the end of the twentieth century A quarter of a million people died during the period 1974-1996 Many of those who survived the wars chose temporary refuge in neighboring countries such as Honduras and Costa Rica Others traveled far north to Mexico the United States and Canada in search of safety Over two million of those who fled Central America during this period settled in these three countries In this incisive book Maria Cristina Garcia tells the story of that migration and how domestic and foreign policy interests shaped the asylum policies of Mexico the United States and Canada She describes the experiences of the individuals and non governmental organizations primarily church groups and human rights organizations that responded to the refugee crisis and worked within and across borders to shape refugee policy These transnational advocacy networks collected testimonies documented the abuses of states re framed national debates about immigration pressed for changes in policy and ultimately provided a voice for the displaced Garcia concludes by addressing the legacies of the Central American refugee crisis especially recent attempts to coordinate a regional response to the unique problems presented by immigrants and refugees and the challenges of coordinating such a regional response in the post 9/11 era

Reintegration of Nicaraguan Refugees and Internally Displaced Persons Marvin Ortega, 1991 After Involuntary Migration Milica Zarkovic Bookman, 2002-01-01 Some 35 million involuntarily displaced people live in refugee camps in over 90 countries many have done so for decades and live among generations of their families The camps now constitute towns and villages of their own with ad hoc social and political systems and complicated relationships with the governments that house them In After Involuntary Migration Milica Bookman provides the first comprehensive analysis of the political economies of refugee camps Drawing on research from in depth studies of over thirty such settlements the book illustrates the economic interaction between the camps and their neighboring host communities Bookman examines the forms of legitimate and illegitimate discrimination that restricts the camps participation in their host economies and explores the different ways democratic market oriented countries and those with command economies approach the camps on their fringes With emphasis on the social politics of the encampments After Involuntary Migration gives direction to the policymaker and insight to the social scientist Nicaraguan Repatriation to Mosquitia Marvin Ortega,1991 Black

Autonomy Jennifer Goett,2016-11-30 Decades after the first multicultural reforms were introduced in Latin America Afrodescendant people from the region are still disproportionately impoverished underserved policed and incarcerated In Nicaragua Afrodescendants have mobilized to confront this state of siege through the politics of black autonomy For women and men grappling with postwar violence black autonomy has its own cultural meanings as a political aspiration and a way of crafting selfhood and solidarity Jennifer Goett s ethnography examines the race and gender politics of activism for autonomous rights in an Afrodescendant Creole community in Nicaragua Weaving together fifteen years of research Black Autonomy follows this community based movement from its inception in the late 1990s to its realization as an autonomous territory in 2009 and beyond Goett argues that despite significant gains in multicultural recognition Afro Nicaraguan Creoles continue to grapple with the day to day violence of capitalist intensification racialized policing and drug war militarization in their territories Activists have responded by adopting a politics of autonomy based on race pride territoriality self determination and self defense Black Autonomy shows how this political radicalism is rooted in African diasporic identification and gendered cultural practices that women and men use to assert control over their bodies labor and spaces in an atmosphere of violence Repatriation Under Conflict in Central America Mary Ann Larkin,Frederick C.
