Politicians' Reading of Public Opinion and Its Biases Stefaan Walgrave, Karolin Soontjens, Julie Sevenans, 2022 Politicians care a lot about public opinion they put great effort in getting to know what the people want They almost constantly assess public opinion through a large variety of sources And although most of them define themselves as trustees in their actual day to day decision making almost all politicians behave as delegates in the sense that they hardly ever deliberately cross public opinion but act in line with it or act not at all Notwithstanding their great focus on public opinion politicians perceptions of what it is that the people want are remarkably inaccurate They not only misjudge the share of people supporting specific policies they also quite often position the majority on the wrong side of the debate Their perceptions of public opinion are not only inaccurate but most of the time biased as well Politicians perceive the public to hold more right wing positions than it actually does Together the inaccuracy and bias of politicians public opinion perceptions challenge the idea that elected representatives make representative democracy work by relying on their public opinion perceptions In Flanders in Belgium the political system this books looks at politicians do everything within their power to understand citizens preferences but they do not succeed in acting responsively because of their mistaken perceptions Politics for People Forrest David Mathews, 1999 This volume points out that many Americans making no secret of their anger at being shut out of the political system are looking for ways to take that system back Because of their low opinion of politics as usual the author contends that some people are trying to create a politics relevant to their everyday lives He describes how people become politically engaged how they build civic communities and how they generate political energy or public will He argues that political discussion is the doorway into politics and he makes a case for infusing partisan debate with more public dialog He then explains what a democratic citizenry must do if representative government is to perform effectively and he shows how officials might work with and not just for the public The author integrates an examination of the dilemma of inaccessible politics with practical examples of ways in which ordinary citizens can manage influence and even capture the future of their own communities Politicians and Public Services Kate Jenkins, 2010-01-01 This book is an authoritative account of the establishment of the Next Steps agencies the greatest change in the UK civil service of recent years The saga is told superbly from the author's vantage point as a leading participant in helping to shape the change She reveals the pressures on and inside the civil service both for and against reform She illuminates the relationships between politicians and civil servants Her wise advice on how they can collaborate constructively to deliver public services also draws on her worldwide experience as a consultant about governance in developing countries and is especially relevant to current concerns about reform of public services G W Jones Emeritus Professor of Government LSE UK This book is essential reading for anyone who wants to understand why governments fail to deliver what they promise It is the authoritative insider's account of the Next Steps initiative under Mrs Thatcher by someone who was central to it Her analysis is uncomfortable but her insights spiced with some nice anecdotes are as wise and relevant as ever Her message for politicians and senior officials alike is uncompromising look at the job first and equip yourselves to do it properly or you will fail and the rest of us suffer Thank goodness she has written it all down No one can say they weren't told Lord Wilson of Dinton former Cabinet Secretary and now Master of Emmanuel College Cambridge The continued failure to provide public services both to agreed standards and electorate expectations is one of the major problems of modern government Drawing on the experience of government in the UK and beyond this book considers the ways in which public institutions have tried to adapt to meet new demands The author argues that there is a common inability to connect ideas and decisions between politicians and those responsible for managing public sector organisations and discusses in detail the initiatives launched in the UK to establish a new approach to management particularly Next Steps and Executive Agencies By analysing public sector management in a number of countries since the reforms of the 1980s this valuable book examines past problems and suggests future improvements to the ways in which public services should be managed including the development of relations between politicians and officials and ways to improve decision taking and management for government As a senior official in Mrs Thatcher's government the author describes in detail and from the inside the process of planning and introducing executive agencies a major change in one of the largest governments in the world She emphasises the intense difficulty involved in getting agreement to change and to implement decisions discussing the problems of conflicting objectives between politicians and officials in dealing with the practicalities of managing large public sector institutions The UK experience of executive agencies has been influential across the world and in many countries This book describes how the UK system was devised and introduced This book will appeal to an international spectrum of academics and students especially those involved in public sector reform and public sector management and political decision taking It will also be of great interest to contemporary historians of the Thatcher period and beyond as well as politicians and commentators concerned with government reform public sector management and the role of politicians In Defense of Politicians Stephen K. Medvic, 2013 Politicians are reviled From jokes on late night TV talk shows to radio show rants and from public opinion polls to ubiquitous conventional wisdom politicians are among the most despised professional class in modern society Drawing on seminal work in political science Stephen K Medvic convincingly argues to the masses that this blanket condemnation of politicians is both unfair and unwarranted While some individual politicians certainly deserve scorn for misjudgments moral failings or even criminal acts the assumption that all of them should be cast in a similar light is unjustified More importantly that deeply cynical assumption is dangerous to the legitimacy of a democratic system of government Politicians as a class deserve respect not out of blind obedience to authority but because democratic deliberation requires it Medvic explains how cognitive biases in the way people reason often lead us to draw unjustified conclusions of politicians in general based on the malfeasance of some Scandals involving politicians are likely to be remembered and to serve as evidence of the belief that they all do it Most politicians in fact care deeply about their cities states and nation But they face a trap of unrealistic and contradictory expectations from the public about how politicians should behave Medvic in turn demonstrates the necessity of ambition the utility of politics for resolving conflicts peacefully and the value of ideology in framing political choices In the end citizens must learn to tolerate the inherent messiness of politics as the only viable alternative to violent conflict In the process we must embrace our role in the political system as well

Politicians Gaslighting Americans Dennis Gravelle, Jack Young, 2023-10-25 About the Book Across this country we seem to have elite politicians and big corporations telling us they should be trusted and that We the People should be little sheep and remain quiet so a new world order can be created They don't need our input since they already know what we want Mainstream media programs always want to get the experts advice so they get high profile politicians to talk down to Americans It is sad because most of America has become brainwashed That includes Democrat and Republican constituents Several of us see through the lies and are becoming more vocal This is a book where you the citizens of this great country tell everyone how we really feel about where this country is heading Politicians should read this and understand that we are fed up with the lack of action from them This book is easy to read the chapters are not long enough to bore you This book is dedicated to all those individuals who took the time to answer the questions I asked over several months This book covers current hot topics in America that are sure to affect our future Basically this book is by the people for the people and shares the opinions of the Soldiers that I interviewed I am sure that Jack and I will be criticized by some for these topics We don't care we must wake people up before we lose our basic rights and freedoms These fed up citizens who kindly agreed to be interviewed are Patriots and without them we could not have completed this book Jack and I are just the conduit everyone who shared their stories made writing this book for all people an amazing and rewarding experience About the Author Dennis Gravelle and Jack Young are forming a minor political party in South Carolina called the Independent Constitutional Party They feel you must be the one to stand out in front and be a leader in politics rather than sit and complain Gravelle loves to golf go on walks going to the beach or watching a local band with a great friend Madeline

International Migration and Development in South Asia Md Rahman, Tan Tai Yong, 2015-04-10 In migration studies the nexus between migration and development in the global South has been meticulously debated. However, a unanimous resolution to this debate has not been found due to the ever-changing nature of international migration. This book advances knowledge on the global debate on the migration development relationship by documenting experiences in a number of countries in South Asia. Drawing on the experiences of global South Asians, this volume documents the impact of migration on the social, economic and political fields in the broader context of development. It also presents a regional experience by looking into the migration development nexus in the context of South Asia and analyses the role South Asian migrants and diaspora communities play in the South Asian society. Contributions from a variety of disciplinary backgrounds including sociology, anthropology, political science, international relations and economics document the development implications of South Asian migration. Broad in scope in terms of contents, timeline of migration and geographical coverage, the book presents empirically based case studies involving India, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Pakistan and Nepal and their emigrants living and working in different parts of the world. Going beyond reporting the impacts of migration on economic development by highlighting the implications of social development on society, this book provides a fascinating contribution to the fields of Asian Development, Migration Studies and South Asian Studies.

Capital, Privilege and Political Participation Joe Greenwood-Hau, 2025-08-15 This book will be available open access upon publication. Capital, Privilege and Political Participation examines how privilege and people's perceptions of it relate to their involvement in politics. It treats people's stocks of economic, social and cultural capital as indicators of privilege as well as resources that help them engage with politics. It also argues that how people perceive privilege in society, their own lives and politics matters for their political participation. Using survey, interview and focus group evidence, the book shows that capital and perceptions of privilege do indeed relate to involvement in a host of political activities. Whilst political participation is a normal, if not daily, feature of many people's lives, having more economic and cultural capital is associated with being more politically active. Perceiving the role of privilege in society is also linked to higher levels of participation, whilst perceiving privilege in politics is unsurprisingly associated with being less politically active. Questions abound about how, if at all, capital and perceptions of privilege are causally related to political participation, but the book concludes that getting involved in politics is a distinguished activity. Efforts to tackle these inequalities in participation should, according to the people who participated in the research, centre on outreach activities by political institutions, more extensive and consistent citizenship education and the active opening up of politics to the population.
