Josselin, W. Wallace, 2001-10-29 The involvement of non state actors in world politics can hardly be characterised as novel but intensifying economic and social exchange and the emergence of new modes of international governance have given them much greater visibility and many would argue a more central role Non state Actors in World Politics offers analyses of a diverse range of economic social legal and illegal old and new actors such as the Catholic Church trade unions diasporas religious movements transnational corporations and organised crime      Letting the People Decide Richard Johnston, 1992 Combining existing scholarly literature historical data theoretical breadth analytic innovation and most important their own rich and extensive survey data the authors come to three main conclusions The first is that the events of a campaign do have an impact on the final vote Journalists and candidates take this as a fundamental premise but until recently few political scientists concurred Campaigns it has long been argued at most reminded voters about fundamental issues such as the economy and voters long term predispositions Second the authors assert that history sets the stage for campaigns and constrains their possibilities Some constraints are shown to be more binding than others and some historical periods to impose more constraints than others This analysis leads to the construction of a general theory of campaigns one that can predict when campaigns will and will not be important Third the authors conclude that campaigns can do more than determine which party will hold power they can also be the occasion for a fundamental realignment The authors support this view by reference both to their research results and to basic theories of social choice BOOK JACKET      Misplaced Distrust Éric Montpetit, 2011-11-01 Citizens of industrialized countries largely share a sense that national and international governance is inadequate believing not only that public authorities are incapable of making the right policy decisions but also that the entire network of state and civil society actors responsible for the discussion negotiation and implementation of policy choices is untrustworthy Using agro environmental policy development in France the United States and Canada as case studies ric Montpetit sets out to investigate the validity of this distrust through careful attention to the performance of the relevant policy networks He concludes that distrust in policy networks is for the most part misplaced because high levels of performance by policy networks are more common than many political analysts and citizens expect Opposing the tenets of state retrenchment his study reveals that providing participation in governance to resourceful interest groups and strong government bureaucracies is an essential component of sound environmental policies for agriculture A timely and crucial contribution to the good governance debate this book should be required reading for policy makers and politicians as well as students and scholars of public policy political science environmental studies and government
