Politics Of Deterrence:

Deterrence Patrick M. Morgan, 1983      Strategic Studies and World Order Bradley S. Klein, 1994-05-05 In this 1994 book Bradley Klein draws upon debates in international relations theory to raise important questions about the nature of strategic studies. He argues that post modern critiques of realism and neorealism open up opportunities for new ways of thinking about nuclear deterrence. In clear and uncluttered language he explores the links between modernity, state building and strategic violence and argues that American foreign policy and NATO undertook a set of dynamic political practices intended to make and remake world order in the image of Western identity. Klein warns against too facile a celebration of the end of the Cold War concluding that it is even more imperative today to appreciate the scope and power of the Western strategic project. The book will be of interest to students of international relations theory, strategic studies, peace studies and US foreign policy.      The International Politics of Deterrence Barry Buzan, 1987      Deterrence by Diplomacy Anne E.

Sartori, 2007-08-26 Why are countries often able to communicate critical information using diplomacy? Why do countries typically use diplomacy honestly despite incentives to bluff? Why are they often able to deter attacks using merely verbal threats? International relations theory is largely pessimistic about the prospects for effective diplomacy yet leaders nevertheless expend much time and energy trying to resolve conflicts through verbal negotiations and public statements. Deterrence by Diplomacy challenges standard understandings of deterrence by analyzing it as a form of talk and reaches conclusions about the effectiveness of diplomacy that are much more optimistic. Anne Sartori argues that diplomacy works precisely because it is so valuable. States take pains to use diplomacy honestly most of the time because doing so allows them to maintain reputations for honesty which in turn enhance their ability to resolve future disputes using diplomacy rather than force. So to maintain the effectiveness of their diplomacy states sometimes acquiesce to others' demands when they might have been able to attain their goals through bluffs. Sartori theorizes that countries obtain a trade of issues over time: they get their way more often when they deem the issues more important and concede more often when they deem the issues less important. Departing from traditional theory, this book shows that rather than always fighting over small issues to show resolve, states can make their threats more credible by sometimes honestly acquiescing over lesser issues by not crying wolf.

The Arms Dynamic in World Politics Barry Buzan, Eric Herring, 1998 Presented as a successor to the Cold War era book An Introduction to Strategic Studies, this volume explores issues of military security through a framework that links the issues of technology and world politics. Arguing that the technological aspect of the global strategic environment is partway through a centuries long process of transformation, sped up by the advent of the information age, the authors examine such issues as different levels of industrial development on security. What they argue is the relative infrequency of the use of force between states, the use of military threats such as mass destruction concepts that military means create problems in themselves such as fear of war and insecurity, and finally ways in which regulatory schemes such as disarmament can be put to use to solve some of those problems Paper edition unseen 22 50 Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR

Nuclear Dilemma (Routledge Revivals) Yair Evron, 2014-06-03 Originally published in 1994 Yair Evron opens the book with an account of the development of Israel's nuclear doctrine and the internal disagreements within the Israeli political and strategic elite over how nuclear policy should be conducted. There follows an analysis of the reactions from Arab states and of how, with the exception of Iraq, they have so far refrained from developing their own nuclear weapons. Nuclear Weapons and the Future of Humanity Avner Cohen, Steven Lee, Steven P. Lee, 1986 Political Realism And International Morality Kenneth Kipnis, Diana T. Meyers, 2019-06-26 It is always appropriate to ask whether an expedient foreign policy is morally justifiable just as it is always appropriate to ask whether a morally defensible policy is consistent with the national interest. The ongoing dialogue between morality and realpolitik gives much of foreign policy debate its characteristic bite. In this collection of essays a distinguished group of philosophers, political theorists and lawyers including Russell Hardin and Marshall Cohen explore these contrasting themes. In essays that are at once insightful and accessible, noted political thinkers examine the tension of the conflicting demands of morality and national self-interest in the context of the foundations of international order, the possession and use of nuclear weapons, recourse to war and the prospects for peace. A final postscript addresses the question of the responsibility of intellectuals in the national foreign policy debate. This book will appeal to scholars and students in any discipline dealing with international affairs as well as to lay readers who wish to explore the implications of taking morality and reason seriously in foreign policy. Deconstructing International Politics Michael Dillon, 2013 Michael Dillon is internationally regarded for his contributions by political philosophers, international relations scholars and security studies experts as well as by philosophers more broadly. It is difficult to overrate his importance to the development of critical deconstructive approaches not only in challenging traditional scholarship and addressing contemporary politics but in articulating new approaches and new thinking. This book draws together some of his key works and is framed by an introduction written specially for the volume. It is the first full-length work to draw on the insights and techniques of deconstruction to analyse international relations. Influenced primarily by Derrida, it critiques the cornerstones of international relations such as modernity, the state, the subject, security and ethics and justice. This volume will provide an invaluable resource for teaching at undergraduate and postgraduate levels on traditional international relations courses and on the increasing number of specialised courses in critical approaches. Well designed and structured, it is accessible to the novice as well as challenging for the specialist. Richard Ned Lebow: A Pioneer in International Relations Theory, History, Political Philosophy and Psychology Richard Ned Lebow, Nathan Funk, 2016-09-13 This is the first of four volumes to be published as part of this book series on the life and work of Richard Ned Lebow. In a career spanning six decades, Richard Ned Lebow has made important contributions to the study of international relations, political and intellectual history, motivational and social psychology, philosophy of science and classics. He has authored, co-authored or edited 30 books and almost 250 peer-reviewed articles. These four volumes are excerpts from this corpus. The first volume includes an intellectual autobiography bibliography and assessments of Lebow's contributions to diverse fields by respected authorities. It shows how a scholar's agenda evolves in response to world events and his efforts to grapple with them theoretically and substantively. It elaborates pathways for addressing these events and their consequences in an interdisciplinary manner and offers new concepts and methods for doing so. Richard Lebow's research bridges international relations, psychology, history, classics, political theory, and philosophy of science. He is author, coauthor, or editor of 34 books and almost 250 peer-reviewed articles. Contributors to the book are Simon Reich, Mervyn Frost, Janice Gross Stein, Stefano Guzzini, Markus Kornprobst, Harald Müller, Christian Wendt, Robert English.
