The Pre-Islamic Middle East

Martin Sicker, 2000-04-30 Sicker explores the political history of the Middle East from antiquity to the Arab conquest from a geopolitical perspective He argues that there are a number of relatively constant environmental factors that have helped condition not determine the course of Middle Eastern political history from ancient times to the present These factors primarily but not exclusively geography and topography contributed heavily to establishing the patterns of state development and interstate relations in the Middle East that have remained remarkably consistent throughout the troubled history of the region In addition to geography and topography the implications of which are explored in depth religion has also played a major political role in conditioning the pattern of Middle Eastern history The Greeks first introduced the politicization of religious belief into the region in the form of pan Hellenism which essentially sought to impose Greek forms of popular religion and culture on the indigenous peoples of the region as a means of solidifying Greek political control This ultimately led to religious persecution as a state policy Subsequently the Persian Sassanid Empire adopted Zoroastrianism as the state religion for the same purpose and with the same result Later when Armenia adopted Christianity as the state religion followed soon after by the Roman Empire religion and the intolerance it tended to breed became fundamental ingredients in regional politics and have remained such ever since Sicker shows that the political history of the pre Islamic Middle East provides ample evidence that the geopolitical and religious factors conditioning political decision making tended to promote military solutions to political problems making conflict resolution through war the norm with the peaceful settlement of disputes quite rare A sweeping synthesis that will be of considerable interest to scholars students and others concerned with

Middle East history and politics as well as international relations and ancient history Jews and Arabs in Pre- and Early Islamic Arabia Michael Lecker, 1999 Most of the articles in this volume belong to what can be described as the preparatory work which is prerequisite to the study of pre and early Islamic history Lecker's interests include tribal Arabia including tribes in the Yemen and Hadramawt the history of the Arabian Jews the biography of the Prophet Muhammad and early Islamic literature in general While the studies are based on a wide range of sources they often focus on illuminating small accounts which are analyzed and placed in their historical context The comprehensive index renders the articles easily accessible Pre-Islamic Arabia Valentina A. Grasso, 2023-02-23 Explores the composite cultural and political milieu of pre Islamic Arabia situating its history within the broader late antique context Arabia and the Arabs Robert G. Hoyland, 2002-09-11 Using a wide range of sources inscriptions poetry histories and archaeological evidence Robert G. Hoyland explores the main cultural areas of Arabia from ancient Sheba in the South to the deserts and oases of the north

The Islamic Middle East Charles Lindholm, 2008-04-30 The Islamic Middle East is a rare thought provoking account of the origins nature and evolution of Islam that provides a historical perspective vital to understanding the contemporary Middle East Nomadic Societies in the Middle East And North Africa Dawn Chatty, 2006 A volume devoted to an understanding of contemporary nomadic and pastoral societies in the Middle East and North Africa It recognizes the variable mobile quality of the ways of life of these societies which accommodate the nation state but remain firmly transnational and highly adaptive 'Pre-Islamic Survivals' in Muslim Central Asia R. Charles Weller, 2023-04-30 The book traces the conceptual lens of historical cultural survivals from the late 19th century theories of E. B. Tylor James Frazer and others in debate with monotheistic degenerationists and Protestant anti Catholic polemicists back to its origins in Jewish Christian and Muslim traditions as well as later more secularized forms in the German Enlightenment and Romanticist movements These historical sources particularly the dual faith tradition of Russian Orthodoxy significantly shaped both Tsarist and later Soviet ethnography of Muslim Central Asia helping guide and justify their respective religious missionary social legal political and other imperial agendas They continue impacting post Soviet historiography in complex and debated ways Drawing from European Central Asian Middle Eastern and world history the fields of ethnography and anthropology as well as Christian and Islamic studies the volume contributes to scholarship on syncretism and conversion definitions of Islam history as identity and heritage and more It is situated within a broader global historical frame addressing debates over pre Islamic Survivals among Turkish and Iranian as well as Egyptian North African Berber Black African and South Asian Muslim Peoples while critiquing the legacy of the Geertzian cultural turn within Western post colonialist scholarship in relation to diverging trends of historiography in the post World War Two era Women in the Middle East Nikki R. Keddie, 2012-08-09 Written by a pioneer in the field of Middle Eastern women's history Women in the Middle East is a concise comprehensive and authoritative history of the lives of the region's women since the rise of Islam Nikki Keddie shows

why hostile or apologetic responses are completely inadequate to the diversity and richness of the lives of Middle Eastern women and she provides a unique overview of their past and rapidly changing present The book also includes a brief autobiography that recounts Keddie's political activism as one of the first women in Middle East Studies Positioning women within their individual economic situations identities families and geographies Women in the Middle East examines the experiences of women in the Ottoman Empire and Turkey in Iran and in all the Arab countries Keddie discusses the interaction of a changing Islam with political cultural and socioeconomic developments In doing so she shows that like other major religions Islam incorporated ideas and practices of male superiority but also provoked challenges to them Keddie breaks with notions of Middle Eastern women as faceless victims and assesses their involvement in the rise of modern nationalist socialist and Islamist movements While acknowledging that conservative trends are strong she notes that there have been significant improvements in Middle Eastern women's suffrage education marital choice and health

Sacred Place and Sacred Time in the Medieval Islamic Middle East Daniella Talmon-Heller, 2020-03-18 This book offers a fresh perspective on religious culture in the medieval Middle East It investigates the ways Muslims thought about and practiced at sacred spaces and in sacred times through two detailed case studies the shrines in honour of the head of al Husayn the martyred grandson of the Prophet and the holy month of Rajab The changing expressions of the veneration of the shrine and month are followed from the formative period of Islam until the late Mamluk period paying attention to historical contexts and power relations Readers will find interest in the attempt to integrate the two perspectives synchronically and diachronically in a discussion of the relationship between the sanctification of space and time in individual and communal piety and in the religious literature of the period

Literacy and Identity in Pre-Islamic Arabia M.C.A. Macdonald, 2022-02-23 In these studies Michael Macdonald examines the extraordinary flowering of literacy in both the settled and nomadic populations of western Arabia in the 1500 years before the birth of Islam when a larger proportion of the population could read and write than in any other part of the ancient Near East and possibly any other part of the ancient world Even among the nomads there seems to have been almost universal literacy in some regions The scores of thousands of inscriptions and graffiti they left paint a vivid picture of the way of life social systems and personal emotions of their authors information which is not available for any other non literate population in the ancient Near East outside Egypt This abundance of inscriptions has enabled Michael Macdonald to explore in detail some of the often surprising ways in which reading and writing were used in the literate and non literate communities of ancient Arabia He describes the many different languages and the distinct family of alphabets used in ancient Arabia and discusses the connections between the use of particular languages or scripts and expressions of personal and communal identity The problem of how ancient perceptions of ethnicity in this region can be identified in the sources is another theme of these papers more specifically they deal from several different perspectives with the question of what ancient writers meant when they applied the term Arab to a wide variety of
