Physics Methods in Archaeometry Società italiana di fisica, 2004 The role of exact sciences in connection with cultural heritage now is well established and a new scientific branch has been generated Archaeometry Literally Archaeometry means measurement on ancient objects It is a multidisciplinary field of Investigations where the rigorous methods of exact sciences give a fundamental contribution to solving the problems associated with conservation and restoration as well as to the study itself of the cultural heritage Archaeometry as a scientific research field involves interdisciplinary groups formed by scholars of the humanistic area together with scientists physicists chemists mathematicians biologists engineers etc The primary justification for the need of involving exact sciences in the field which in the past traditionally has been exclusive of Art Historians must no doubt be found in the conservation and restoration

Geochemical Evidence for Long-Distance Exchange Michael D. Glascock,2002-12-30 Studies of prehistoric exchange of goods provide information about the types of economic interaction social organization or political structures in which prehistoric peoples were engaged Long distance exchange is a special situation where the materials exchanged crossed significant boundaries whether they were geographic social political or otherwise By examining the types and quantities of goods exchanged along with the directions and distances they moved archaeologists are able to examine the dynamic properties of exchange systems i e how they operate and why they undergo change The purpose of this volume is to present a number of case studies of long distance exchange from around the world which demonstrate the use of geochemical analysis of artifacts to find evidence of exchange More important than the use of analytical technique employed or the types of artifacts studied are the interpretations themselves which illustrate that exchange studies are maturing and helping archaeologists to develop more accurate models of exchange The Nature and Pace of Change in American Indian Cultures R. Gabriel Hrynck, 2022-03-22 The Far Northeast 3000 BP to Contact is the first volume to synthesize archaeological research from across Atlantic Canada and northern New England for the period spanning from 3000 years ago to European contact Recently notions of the Woodland period in the broader Northeast have drawn scrutiny from experts due to increasing awareness that its hallmarks such as horticulture village formation mortuary ceremonialism and the advent of various technologies appear to be less synchronous than once thought By paying particular attention to the Far Northeast and its unique yet sometimes marginal position in Woodland discourse this work offers a much needed in depth look at one of the best documented cases of hunter gatherer persistence and adaptation at the eve of European contact Penned by academic government and cultural resource management archaeologists the seventeen chapters in The Far Northeast 3000 BP to Contact draw on decades of research in considering this period both in terms of variability within the region and integration with broader cultural patterns in the Northeast and beyond Old Man's Playing Ground Gabriel M. Yanicki, 2014-03-27 Oral traditions of the Piik ni together with textual records spanning centuries reveal the enduring cultural significance of prehistoric intergroup trading and gaming grounds When Hudson's Bay Company surveyor Peter Fidler made contact with the Ktunaxa at the Gap of the Oldman River in the winter of 1792 his Piik ni guides brought him to the river's namesake. These were the playing grounds where Napi or Old Man taught the various nations how to play a game as a way of making peace. In the centuries since, travelers, adventurers, and scholars have recorded several accounts of Old Man's Playing Ground and of the hoop and arrow game that was played there. Although it has been destroyed, much can be learned from an interdisciplinary study of Old Man's Playing Ground. Oral traditions of the Piik ni and other First Nations of the Northwest Plains and Interior Plateau, together with textual records spanning centuries, show it to be a place of enduring cultural significance, irrespective of its physical remains. Knowledge of the site and the hoop and arrow game played there is widespread, in keeping with historic and ethnographic accounts of multiple groups meeting and gambling at the site. In this work, oral tradition, history, and ethnography are brought together with a geomorphic assessment of the playing ground's most probable location, a floodplain scoured and rebuilt by floodwaters of the Oldman, and the archaeology of adjacent prehistoric campsite D1Po 8. Taken together, the locale can be understood as a nexus for cultural interaction and trade through the medium of gambling and games on the natural frontier between peoples of the Interior Plateau and Northwest Plains.
