Media And The Presidentialization Of Parliamentary Elections:

Media and the Presidentialization of Parliamentary Elections Anthony Mughan, 2000-10-10 In theory parliamentary elections are a contest between political parties whose leaders do not have a separate identity from their party in the public eye This case study of Britain shows that this theory no longer holds the dynamics of parliamentary elections have become more presidential in the sense that the leaders of the major parties now figure more prominently on both media coverage of the campaign and in the party that voters choose at the polls The implications for our understanding of parliamentary democracy are discussed

Mass Media James B. Martin, 2002 Mass media has become an integral part of the human experience News travels around the world in a split second affecting people in other countries in untold ways Although being on top of the news may be good at least for news junkies mass media also transmits values or the lack thereof condenses complex events and thoughts to simplified sound bites and often ignores the essence of an event or story The selective bibliography gathers the books and magazine literature over the previous ten years while providing access through author title and subject indexes

Performing Politics: Media Interviews, Debates and Press Conferences Geoffrey Craig, 2016-06-03 For successful political leaders public speaking is only half the battle A good politician must also be a competent performer Whether facing critical questions in an interview posturing in a leaders debate or conversing on a daytime chat show success is reliant upon a candidate s ability to dramatically but authentically impart a strong individual identity In this innovative analysis Geoffrey Craig looks at the interrogative exchanges between politicians and journalists The power struggles and evasions in these encounters often leave the public exasperated but it is the politicians negotiation of these struggles that determines success Drawing on analyses of the language and performances of leaders such as Barack Obama and David Cameron Craig examines the particular kinds of interactions that occur across political interviews debates conferences and talk shows The political games that take place between politicians and journalists he argues constitute the true theatre of politics Engaging and insightful Performing Politics will appeal to students and scholars of journalism politics linguistics and media studies as well as anyone concerned about the quality of contemporary political communication

Leaders' Personalities and the Outcomes of Democratic Elections Anthony King, 2002-03-21 The conventional wisdom purveyed by the press and television and accepted as true by most politicians is that elections throughout the democratic world are personal clashes between individual presidential candidates and party leaders Almost everyone assumes that election outcomes are frequently determined by the major candidates personal characteristics In the United States Al Gore in 2000 came over as aloof and arrogant and failed to win his expected victory In Great Britain Tony Blair in 2001 came across as dynamic and personable and won a second term So personal charisma appears to yield electoral success This study by eminent scholars on both sides of the Atlantic suggests that the conventional wisdom is wrong Survey research conducted in recent decades indicates that relatively few voters are swayed by candidates' personal characteristics Far more important are voters' longstanding party loyalties their views on issues and their judgments of how well or badly presidents and parties have performed or will perform in office The votes of even the few electors who are swayed by candidates' personalities usually cancel each other out As a result election outcomes are seldom decided by individual candidates' personal images Occasionally but not often Ronald Reagan and Bill Clinton owed their election victories more to economics than to charm At the end of World War II the charismatic Winston Churchill lost the 1945 British general election the colorless Clement Attlee won Chancellor Helmut Kohl remained in power in Germany for a generation but was never personally popular Russian voters reckoned that Boris Yeltsin could not hold his drink but nevertheless elected him The implications of the authors' analyses are profound They suggest that modern democratic politics is not nearly as candidate centered and personality oriented as is often supposed They also suggest that parties' policies and their performance in office usually count for far more than the men and women they choose as their leaders Not least the authors suggest that the efforts of political consultants advertising agencies and spin doctors are often misdirected demonstrate how much more accurate sentiment analysis can prove

Mind the Backlash: Gender Discrimination and Sexism in Contemporary Societies Hilde Coffe, Susan Banducci, Marta Fraile, Jessica Fortin-Rittberger, Amy

Alexander,2023-09-26 Decades of campaigns and policy efforts have brought significant progress in women s economic and political status and pushed gender equality up the global policy agenda The goal of gender equality however still remains largely out of reach as illustrated by the recent wave of women s protests against sexual harassment assault and gender violence e g MeToo movement Some European countries e g Poland Hungary and Lithuania have even seen their performance on gender equality backslide in recent years and in parallel to calls for increased equality a wave of mobilisation against gender equality has appeared in the public discourse Conservative authoritarian and populist voices in many democracies are now contesting the equal participation of men and women in society under the auspices of a war on gender ideology This backlash against women s empowerment carries considerable implications for anti discrimination laws policies protecting women against domestic violence reproductive health and the establishment of gender quotas Given the backlash against gender observed in various countries around the globe we argue that now is a critical time to revisit and broaden our knowledge about gender discrimination gender equality and sexism Our proposed Research Topic will provide a gender perspective to illustrate and understand the recent illiberal turn in politics in a variety of contexts Taking a comparative approach we aim at improving our understanding of how sexism discrimination and gender equality operate at the societal level and how they shape broader social and political views At the individual level we will study the current seemingly opposing forces for and against gender equality by analysing the antecedents predispositions experiences and motivations explaining and underpinning these attitudes towards different ways of gender equality sexism and discrimination
