Official Financing For Developing Countries World Economic And Financial Surveys:

Official Financing for Developing Countries International Monetary Fund, 2001-08-02 This paper reports an updated assessment of movements in official financing for developing countries during 1997-1999. The composition of official financing flows changed too as a result of the Asian crisis. Member states of the Development Assistance Committee (DAC) increased official development financing from 73 billion in 1996 to 85 billion in 1999. At the same time, however, new commitments by export credit agencies, a resource not included in the DAC figures, declined during this period, reflecting a slowing down in large scale projects as governments affected by the Asian financial crisis suspended or postponed a number of public sector projects. The debt relief and its orientation toward poverty reduction is an important contribution to international efforts to help raise the living standards of the poorest in the world. Its success, however, will crucially depend on the willingness of donor countries to increase resources for development aid and link them to the recipient countries' poverty reduction strategies.

1994 World Economic & Financial Surveys; Official Financing for Dev. Countries International Monetary Fund, 1994-01-01 This paper focuses mainly on official bilateral and multilateral financing for countries that have rescheduled their debts to official bilateral creditors. In contrast to the approaches taken by private lenders, official creditors have continued to provide new financing on a large scale to countries with debt servicing difficulties that implement adjustment and reform programs. Financial support has been provided through a wide variety of instruments and channels. For the low income rescheduling countries as a group, total financial assistance has been about as large as these countries' own export earnings in every year since 1986. The recent trends in official financing have important ramifications for developing countries. Access to external financing from official sources is likely to remain high for those countries whose adjustment and reform efforts provide assurances that resources will be used efficiently. Conversely, countries with uneven records of policy implementation, particularly as regards payments arrears, are likely to find difficulty in attracting financial support.

World Economic and Financial Surveys International Monetary Fund, 1991-01-01 This paper presents the annual survey of international capital market developments and prospects. It summarizes recent developments in capital market flows and asset prices, including the initial impact of the Middle East crisis, and reviews the main ongoing structural changes in financial markets. A sharp fall in net investment in foreign securities by Japanese institutions in 1990, in the face of narrowing interest rate differentials and in some cases the need to cover losses stemming from the fall in the Japanese stock market, contrasts the importance of net direct investment outflows as a counterpart to the current account surplus, which began increasing as from 1989. The crisis in the Middle East resulted in a further tightening of market conditions, especially for less creditworthy borrowers. A general preference for safer and more liquid financial instruments was reflected in increased spreads between corporate and government securities on national markets and between private sector Eurobonds and government securities denominated in the same currency on international markets.
