Bergmann, Frank R. Hartman, 1990 perspective from acquisition Available for the first time in English this is the definitive account of the practice of sexual slavery the Japanese military perpetrated during World War II by the researcher principally responsible for exposing the Japanese government s responsibility for these atrocities The large scale imprisonment and rape of thousands of women who were euphemistically called comfort women by the Japanese military first seized public attention in 1991 when three Korean women filed suit in a Toyko District Court stating that they had been forced into sexual servitude and demanding compensation Since then the comfort stations and their significance have been the subject of ongoing debate and intense activism in Japan much if it inspired by Yoshimi's investigations. How large a role did the military and by extension the government play in setting up and administering these camps What type of compensation if any are the victimized women due These issues figure prominently in the current Japanese focus on public memory and arguments about the teaching and writing of history and are central to efforts to transform Japanese ways of remembering the war Yoshimi Yoshiaki provides a wealth of documentation and testimony to prove the existence of some 2 000 centers where as many as 200 000 Korean Filipina Taiwanese Indonesian Burmese Dutch Australian and some Japanese women were restrained for months and forced to engage in sexual activity with Japanese military personnel Many of the women were teenagers some as young as fourteen To date the Japanese government has neither admitted responsibility for creating the comfort station system nor given compensation directly to former comfort women This English edition updates the Japanese edition originally published in 1995 and includes introductions by both the author and the translator placing the story in context for American readers Advancing the Power of Economic Evidence to Inform Investments in Children, Youth, and Families National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Board on Children, Youth, and Families, Committee on the Use of Economic Evidence to Inform Investments in Children, Youth, and Families, 2016-08-25 In recent years the U S federal government has invested approximately 463 billion annually in interventions that affect the overall health and well being of children and youth while state and local budgets have devoted almost double that amount The potential returns on these investments may not only be substantial but also have long lasting effects for individuals and succeeding generations of their families Ideally those tasked with making these investments would have available to them the evidence needed to determine the cost of all required resources to fully implement and sustain each intervention the expected returns of the investment to what extent these returns can be measured in monetary or nonmonetary terms and who will receive the returns and when As a result of a number of challenges however such evidence may not be effectively produced or applied Low quality evidence and or a failure to consider the context in which the evidence will be used may weaken society s ability to invest wisely and also reduce future demand for this and other types of evidence Advancing the Power of Economic Evidence to Inform Investments in Children Youth and Families highlights the potential for economic evidence to inform investment decisions for interventions that support the overall health and well being of children youth and families This report describes challenges to the optimal use of economic evidence and offers recommendations to stakeholders to promote a lasting improvement in its quality utility and use
