Social Security Administration,1981 Office Wife Faith Baldwin,1995-12 1929 Faith Baldwin was one of the most popular and prolific mid twentieth century authors of romance fiction She published eighty five books many of them focused on women juggling family and career Mrs Murdock knew when Anne came in to kiss her goodnight that her daughter had again refused to marry Ted O Hara What the world coming to she thought when healthy pretty girls prefer typewriters to babies Well maybe it's just that the right man hasn't come along yet The problem wasn't nearly as simple as that Anne Murdock was young and pretty and desirable but above all she was ambitious She wasn't too impressed with marriage as she had observed it in her own family and among her friends She wanted to climb to the top in business to have her own life her own position her own income If any man were to matter to her it would probably be one who had already made his way to the top Some man like her employer Mr Fellowes head of the Fellowes Advertising Agency And such men already had wives Almost inescapably Larry Fellowes came to matter to Anne not only as an employer in business but as a vigorous handsome attractive man And pretty ardent young Anne Murdock came to matter very much to him It was to them an intense personal problem But it represents more than that It is the problem of the human equation in modern business a new and different problem now that the business world is open to you and intelligent women who want more from life than just a job or just a home and husband The Gentleman's Magazine ,1825
